

School Principal Stresses Need For Another Building

Sam D. Bundy gave an informative report on the present crowded conditions that prevail in the High School, at the Parent-Teacher meeting on Thursday night.

Bundy, principal of the school, appealed to members present to make a mind's eye view of the present enrollment of the school, 774 children, all housed and taught in one block.

He said he knew many citizens wondered why children could be seen on the school grounds for many hours during the day. He explained that he had to rotate recesses and lunch periods from 10 o'clock in the morning until after 1 o'clock, in order to avoid accidents that could be caused by congestion.

Mr. Bundy estimated that 98 new students will go into high school next year—around 80 coming from Fountain and other vicinities. Approximately 50 will be graduated in 1952.

The high school library, considered good in the past, was made too small last year because a room had to be constructed out of one end of it. Students seeking a reference book unavoidably stumble over others because of the crowded conditions.

Art classes, recently begun by Mrs. E. P. Bass, meet in the balcony of the auditorium.

In the elementary grades the situation is even more alarming. The first grade enrollment of 66 children, this year, made it necessary for the two teachers each to have an enrollment of 33; and a large pre-school group will enroll next year.

There is money for the needed building, $70,000, district's share of the State Bond issue, but there is no suitable site for sale.

Escapee Flees In Stolen School Bus And Worker's Auto

John W. Carter, a Greensboro A-grader, prisoner, serving a five to ten year sentence for attempted robbery, escaped from a road gang near the Cobbledale section, Monday. Carter was one of a work gang cutting a right-of-way through a patch of woods. Suddenly he made a break and was soon out of sight in the foliage. The guard hardly had a chance to know what was going on.

Elbert Crawford, student driver for the Bell Arthur School had just made his last stop and had parked his bus in the yard of his home, which is located on the farm of W. L. White. He didn't know that Carter was on the loose and left the key in the ignition.

Carter headed toward Farmville and five miles away on the Greenville Highway, near the site where the O. G. Spell home is being constructed, he abandoned the bus and stole a car belonging to a carpenter named Lee. He drove the car to Kinston, where it ran out of gas; he abandoned that car and stole car No. 2.

Bloodhounds were set on the trail of the prisoner at the White farm but the scent was lost when the man entered the school bus. Efforts are still being made to apprehend the prisoner.

It was agreed that the drive this year be conducted in November, and that everyone in the section be acquainted with the goals and plans for the Community Chest. The various functions of the community which depend upon solicitations for funds will be requested to give the Chest officials an estimate of the amount they will need, or want, from public donations. These requests will be screened and will be used as the basis for a budget. With this budget as a guide, the chest officials will decide upon a quota for the township and will stage an extensive campaign to reach the goal. These funds will be expended during the year for the various organizations and emergencies that may arise among indigent and needy cases.

Midstate Lose To New Bern; Seeking Revenge Sat. Night

The Farmville Midget football team opened its '51 season at New Bern last Thursday night, October 4, by dropping a 26-0 tilt to the Cubs.

Despite the loss to the more experienced New Bern team, the local midgets played better football than the score indicated. This year's "green" team rattled by the loss of all of their last season's regulars learned a lot at New Bern in the way of experience and are looking forward to giving the Cubs a warm reception when the two teams tangle in a return game here on Saturday night.

At The Kiwanis Club

Elbert Moye, head of the local high school's athletic department, talked to the Kiwanis club Monday night about athletics in general and football in particular. The popular young coach was the guest of Rev. Z. B. T. Cox, who gave him a very complimentary introduction and expressed his appreciation for the work he is doing in the school and as head of the town's recreation program. (Moye serves as recreation director during the summer months.)

Coach Moye told the Kiwanians that a coach, first of all, had to have promising boys with whom to work before a winning team could be produced. Candidates for a team must have equipment, and the coach explained that it takes $65 to outfit a member of the football squad. He added, however, that one of the most important prerequisites was a desire on the part of the boys to play—and win.

After his talk about the elements of a successful athletic program, Coach Moye related some anecdotes about football players and outlined some of the basic plays used by his team and their opponents. He stated that football was a continuing game of wits between opposing coaches.

Bernice Turnage, vice president, presided in the absence of Charles Edwards, who was attending the Kiwanis convention in Raleigh.

Red Devils Score First But Lose To Morehead City

The local Red Devils journeyed to Morehead City for a contest with the strong coast team last Friday and left on the short end of a 25-6 score.

Then in the second quarter the local side drove 70 yards downfield to score, the climax being a 20 yard end-around scoring play with Roy Vick carrying the ball.
