GALA PREPARATIONS MADE TO ENTERTAIN FARMERS DAY CROWD

A grand parade with all the trimmings, at 1:30 next Wednesday afternoon, will set off a chain of entertaining events that have been cooked up for the throngs of home folks and visitors who are expected to be here for Farmville's second annual Farmer's Day.

Highlights of the day's program, which appears elsewhere on this page, will be an address by Governor W. Kerr Scott at 3 o'clock, a stage show and special acts at 3:30, a baseball game between Cherry Point Marines and Farmville at 4:30, a beauty contest and a dance in the evening.

Not the least attractive feature of the day's program is that everything is free—the entertainment, the baseball game, and the dance. Not only is the program presented without charge but numerous prizes will be given. Some fortunate visitor will walk away with the grand prize of $100. The prettiest girl in the contest will be given $100. Owner of the best float in the parade will receive $50, and so on.

In addition to these numerous gifts and cash awards various local firms will give handsome prizes in the booths they are setting up on the floor of Monks Warehouse. These prizes will range in value all the way from balloons and trinkets to electric stoves and appliances.

Jurist Addresses Joint Session Of Rotary, Kiwanis

Judge Allen H. Gwyn of Reidsville was the guest speaker at a combined meeting of the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs here last Tuesday. Judge Gwyn was introduced by Dan H. Jones who informed the assembled members and guests that Judge Gwyn has been a superior court judge since 1938 and prior to that time served as solicitor and state senator having been admitted to the bar in 1921 after graduating from Trinity College where he had resumed his education after serving in the first World War.

The principal speaker, candidate for associate of State Supreme Court, took as his subject The Grass Roots of Democracy and after enumerating the traditional freedoms stated that the freedom that gave us the most concern was the freedom from want and pointed out that different systems of government have different ways of overcoming this difficulty. One solution being that of collective security through state control of the means of production and regimentation of workers.

The other and more democratic system left the solution of this problem principally to the individual citizen giving each citizen the freedom of owning the means of production and of seeking employment where he feels best qualified to serve.

While Americans naturally and normally prefer individual self-help to collective security there is a drift toward collective security when individual self-help fails. Government aid means government control and consequently a lessened area of individual liberty and the more aid the less liberty so that complete security guaranteed by government means complete government control and the elimination of all individual liberties.

Explaining the trend toward statism, Judge Gwyn asserted that the exploitation of human resources tends to turn persons exploited toward collective action and that the present need is for leadership to encourage the increase of property owners by encouraging home ownership and savings as well as the increase in individual business enterprises thus increasing the number of capitalists and thereby perpetuating and strengthening the system of free capitalistic enterprise.

The achievements of the capitalistic system within a framework of freedom for all is something of which we can be proud and that this system must be saved because it is the only hope of free people on this earth.

There is not and cannot be any actual and exact economic equality because the capacities and gifts of each individual for productive work and the acquisition of wealth are different both in degree and kind. The whip of economic necessity is necessary to drive many individuals to productive endeavors but there is danger when the individual is not rewarded to a degree commensurate with his contribution to society because such persons are drawn toward government control or statism.

Neither the capitalistic system nor any other can long survive, stated Judge Gwyn, unless it recreates its own kind to perpetuate the system and the safety and the best interests of capitalistic democracy demand that the number of property owners and individuals, with an investment in business enterprises, be continually and substantially increased for otherwise the property-less and the irresponsible by sheer weight of numbers will force a continued trend toward government control and eventually dictatorship.

Jesse Moys, president of the Rotary club, presided over the joint meeting, the second the clubs have had recently. In the first, William B. Umstead was the visiting speaker. On next Monday night, the clubs will have another joint session. The guest will be Hubert Olive, Umstead's opponent in the current gubernatorial contest.

Roddie Ward of Wilson, Marvin Horton, Horton Rountree and Harold Rouse were among the guests.
