AUTO RACES AT THE FAIR

A two hundred mile automobile race as the main event of the next Wayne County Fair. The automobile race to be run off under the supervision of the American Automobile Association and to substituted for the horse races of the past few years. This year, it is a possibility for the coming season. It should be good to us.

For one thing, a good wheelbarrow race would be more interesting than the races which have all been cut and dried, no life, none of the fervor, the keen competition which makes the good quicken and makes a race worth while.

What we have been seeing is simply a nice, easy appetite producing ride around the tracks. The very scheme under which the horse racing has been conducted has tended to make the races stereotyped affairs. A circuit is organized. A number of horses are entered, and the same horses move from one place to another in Eastern Carolina. Wayne agrees to put up $3,000 for a series of races. Lenoir county puts up a nice sum. Pitt county a nice sum. Nash county a tidy sum, and so on.

The riders know what is to be had and why. They make their racing a sure money winner, rather than leave it to chance?

Again, we believe that an automobile race at the Fair, would stimulate a new interest in the region. If automobile racers of sufficient reputation were entered, we have no doubt that the race would be the means of drawing a much heavier gate and from a part of the Eastern section over a wider area.

We hope that the Fair directors will decide on automobile races for the next year in preference to the horse races.

SCOUTS CAMPS

Browned by the outdoor sun and hardened by the strenuous life of the outdoors, the Girl Scouts of Goldsboro have returned home after a beneficial experience at the county club site. Now Monday week the Scouts are going to go into camp at the same site.

It is to be hoped that every Boy Scout in Goldsboro can attend the camp soon to open. For the Scouts will gain in the out-door life, the long hikes, the bird and nature study, the cooling swims in the lake, and the camp routine, an education which the school room cannot afford. At the same time they gain a self reliance, an alertness that should stand them in good stead at any time.

Camps such as the one just concluded by the Girl Scouts and the one soon to be undertaken by the Boys make a valuable contribution to the civic life of the community. Cities everywhere are falling in with the idea that money spent for community camps comes back many times in dividends of good citizenship and stronger bodies, and many camps are being established. At these places the cost is kept to a bare minimum and for a sum equal to what one day's camping in some of the higher priced resorts run for profit, the boy or the girl can gain the entire camping period.

A KANSAS MOB STORY

On the night of March 18, a furious mob made repeated efforts to break into the jail at Coffeyville, Kan., seeking a negro held under suspicion of having attacked two white girls alone in their home at night. The sheriff was a man who believed that his first duty was to uphold the law, and the negro was held safe from the mob, but not until state troops had been called out. The troops finally restored order. Four men were wounded in the efforts to gain an entrance to the jail.

There was no direct evidence that the negro held had committed the crime. The girl had told of negroes being the guilty parties and a suspect had been taken. That was the night of March 18.

Yesterday in Independence, Kansas, the true story of the incident was related. The girl's story of having been attacked by negroes was an entire fabrication, she confessed on the stand yesterday. She identified Ira Kennedy, motor car salesman, in whose house the alleged attack had taken place, as one of the men who attacked her. Margaret Akers is the name of the girl who identified Kennedy. She said on the stand that she had told the story about being attacked by negroes after her mother had counselled her to do so.

If the sheriff at Coffeyville had not acted quickly and surely, if the state troops had not responded, an innocent man would have gone to his death at the hands of a demonic mob, and all because an hysterical girl had followed the foolish counsellings of her mother.

Mobs generally attempt to take vengeance into their own hands after fiendish attacks have been committed, but this Kansas mob story should be given wide circulation for the corrective good it may do. Let it be a warning everywhere when men think hotly and rush illogically in mob fashion to wreak vengeance where they think there should be vengeance.

THE PIEDMONT NORTHERN EXTENSION

A story in The News of Friday morning quotes a Goldsboro man just back from Durham as saying the general impression in the Bull City is that the Piedmont and Northern Railway, if granted permission to extend its lines to Durham will eventually seek a coast terminus. That such has long been the intention of the Duke interests which control the electric railway is the belief of many close observers of industrial trends in the state.

Goldsboro, then, should not be idle in the present situation. The city should take the first initiative to let the officials of the Piedmont and Northern know that the city would co-operate in an effort to extend the lines into Eastern North Carolina. The Chamber of Commerce should get busy on the project. It is quite likely that a fight will arise between Southport and Beaufort as which shall be the terminus for the railway line and Goldsboro, as she would be on the line in case it came to Beaufort, cannot afford to be idle.

There should be a concerted effort among the towns through which the proposed extension would pass, to interest the Piedmont and Northern in the Beaufort terminus. Here is a chance for some excellent co-operation.

A good American is anybody, recently from Europe, who can capture a world record for this glorious land.

SHEARS AND PASTE COTTON OUTLOOK IMPROVED BEYOND ALL EXPECTATIONS

With spot cotton in Raleigh bringing more than sixteen cents for middling, the situation is looking brighter for the many farmers who by reason of their own determination and the co-operation of banks and merchants have been able to withstand the pressure to sell at lower prices. There will unquestionably be much less cotton raised this year in several of the states which are normally heavy producers, and there is hope that acreages have been planted with some degree of caution inspired by last year's record crop. While the condition of cotton this early in the season is on the knees of the gods, it seems unlikely that there will be anything like the glut experienced last year when cotton began to go to the gins and find its way to the markets in volume. Figures sent out by the departments in Washington tend, on the whole, to bear out a more optimistic feeling. For the ten months ending May 31, for instance, exports have been 19,312,493 bales as against 7,342,315 to the corresponding date of 1926, and the movement is continuing. Cotton consumption in American mills also has held up well and exceeds last year's figure to May 31, by 500,000 bales. With more than two good months to come before the next crop is ginned in quantity, it appears that the statistical position following last year's tremendous production will be better than could have been expected.

One of the doubtful things about what has happened to last year's crop is the supplies that the mills have laid in. In this connection there is a feeling that foreign purchasers were more forward than domestic consumers in buying cotton at the low levels. If that is true, it may mean that as the Summer wears on there will be something in the nature of a scramble on the part of United States mills to supply their needs.

At any rate, whatever crop of cotton may be now under cultivation is the subject of a hope that a few months ago would have seemed fantastic had it been predicted.

CHIPS OF THE OLD BLOCK

The old ford sure got some reverence on me yesterday. I sold her top for two dollars so she let me in for a good wetting.

Hope the farmers have enough rain now. This time last month they were praying for rain. Now it is so wet you can't strike a match in a bank vault.

The United States has 24,000,000 automobiles and still some of the girls walk home.

This is certainly good growing weather for the feed they are raising in the middle space in Center Street for the aldermanic bull.

State Board of Health Says Those Living on Coast Should Make Mt'n Trip

RALEIGH, June 18.—(P)—A change in the spice of life and Carolina's scenery have this change without leaving the state this summer.

The State Board of Health officials say those in the mountains should take a trip to the coast and those on the coast should take a trip to the mountains while those in the central part of the state should alternate, driver's choice.

The board wants to provide safeguards for the health and pleasure of visitors in the state over the summer months and also for the health of its own native citizens for "all have brought with them whatever diseases they may harbor and all are subjecting themselves to whatever diseases North Carolina already has."

The state is so thickly populated and the place where safe water may be obtained are so close together there is no excuse for motorists to use the water along the way, the board says, adding that water in all cities or villages where there is an established public water supply is most carefully guarded and may be depended on for drinking purposes.

"Water from individual wells, springs or streams may or may not be safe and the tourist should take no chances with such water." Promiscuous camping is warned against. Milk is pointed to as supplying many deficiencies in a tourist's diet and "tourists should make every effort to secure daily a liberal allowance of milk.

"Persons who live in the state as well as persons from other states, who visit those localities where there are malaria infected mosquitoes, should carry with them mosquito nets to cover their cots if they expect to camp out."

There is the same need for the tourist, the board says, to protect his food from fly contamination as for the person at home although "there is relatively little typhoid in the state but there are many unrecognized typhoid carriers among the tourists as well as the people at home."

The board is frank to discourage tourists from taking along any pet animals, because of rabies. "Tourists are welcome but dogs are not."
