WHEN AMERICA FIGHTS

New fighting men have gone to the recent battles were members of seatewater of these methods when the Canadians went overseas to join their British comrades, but our men from the United States have introduced ideas of modern warfare that differ even from these put into pract. Aboute confidence in the superiority of weapons with which we solders are thoroughly familiar is one of the characteristics that have made the soldiers under General Pershing's command superb military organization.

A large number of the American troops that got into the thick of the fighting when the last German offensive was converted into a defeat were made up of seasoned regiments. Many of these men has gained as a coolly as if on the range. They kept their heads and made their ammunation count. Again and again, according to the testimony of correspondents, they stopped German rushes by the precision and steadness of their fring. And the feature of this defensive work that particularly impressed their French Allies on either side was the fact that they used long-range sights on their rifles and broagen that it is this combination in the American is an antion of sordid money-grables and that men drawn from banks, stores, factories and shops could not be transformed into soldiers in time to effect the decisive battles on the training of their own men for military service. It does not seem to have occurred to them that a nation as highly intelligent as the United States and a people as naturally adaptable and Americans can take up any business, even the business of war, in a fraction of the time required by the Teutons. The proof that this is true was furnished when the German military man, can take up any business, even the business of war, in a fraction of the time required by the Teutons. THE GREAT ADVENTURE

The men who sail on the American transports today embark on the greatest, most unselfish and most glorious adventure of all history. For thousands of years to come men will eagerly read and talk of the great enterprise in which Americans of today are privileged to participate. For thousands of years to come, men to all the world. America has alwed across the ocean to this clean and fresh America, the very name of which has slowly come to mean so much to all the world. America has alken them, given them happiness, freedom, riches and contentment in the fullest possible measure.

Now their descendants return across the ocean to destroy the bestial thing which is the eternal foe of all the Mzil this copy of "Tranch Camp" to the home folks to-day, which have served as the cradle for peoples in the old world the liberty and freedom, the freshness of soul and the cleanness of mind our great country has given to all who have come under her unsullied flag.

Just as we can close our eyes and see the American colors carried by brave, honest and determined men from every corner of the whole vast expanse of America; can see it flown by great flects of warships and transports across the sea; can see it flown by great flects of warships and transports across the sea; can see it borase along the roads of France and Flanders to the frontiers of civilization, so men of all future time will close their eyes and see the American flag carried bravely and triumphantly across the pages of history; will see it come as a symbol of great, human aspirations to bring freedom and peace to an harrassed world.

Think how men will be stirred, how they will thrill and be uplifted, when they read of America's Crusade! They will see the great of history will conjure it all up from the beginning, will see it unfold before them as some marvelous and inspiring pageant. They will see a great nation, standam and the proper of the very names of the boats that bear used to the great president, who so marvelously voices the thoughts of all the nations, slowly strip for action. They will sees a great nation, standing squarely back of the great President, who so marvelously voices the thoughts of all the nations, slowly strip for action. They will sees a great nation, standing squarely back of the great President, who so marvelously voices the thoughts of all the nations, slowly strip for action. They will sees the crusaders we are undergoing today. Let us be infinitely strip for action. They will see the crusaders with all these devery stranger with all these devery stranger of history.

KEEP FIT TO FIGHT

KEEP FIT TO FIGHT

Marshal Foch has spent his whole lifetime in perfecting the strategy which is winning the war.

An unusually intelligent man—concentrating to the utmost for a few months—might possibly learn from Marshal Foch the most important points in that strategy.

But the knowledge would be absolutely valueless to bim unless he possessed the other thing which it has taken Marshal Foch his whole lifetime to perfect—the thing which is the most important part of every soldier's equipment; the thing without which all the rest is of no value.

That is poise—the ability to keep your head no matter how tremendous the excitement about you; the ability to leep utterly calm, cool and collected; the ability to keep always clearly in mind the big ideas into which all the details must be properly fitted.

Have you ever thought that one of the greatest of Marshal Foch's duties is to be able to sleep after the tremendous mental activity of the day? Have you ever thought what any life is to be able to sleep after the tremendous mental activity of the day? Have you ever thought what any life is to be able to sleep after the tremendous mental activity of the day? Have you ever thought what any life is to be able to sleep after the tremendous mental activity of the day? Have you ever thought what any life is to be able to sleep after the tremendous mental activity of the day? to keep utterly calm, cool and collected; the ability to keep always clearly in mind the big ideas into which all the details must be properly fitted.

Have you ever thought of the tens of thousands of facts which are brought to the Allied Generalisimo every day? Have you ever thought how difficult it must be to keep the demands all that every man has of manhood.

The lives of a company or of a regiment—at any time—depend upon the fitness, the poise, the calm, steady dier in the ranks. And no soldier ever has those things unless he deliberately builds them up in himself. It sounds preachy, but it is a fact nevertheless.

CHAFF-FROM WILD OATS

HIM with that INDIVIDUAL called the
SANITARY inspector! A brief for the SANITARY Inspector! DAY in and out he TROTS, sniffing for STRANGE odors, getting CLOSE-UPS of things UNMENTIONABLE, writing NOTES, skinning all who WILL not maintain things IN a sanitary manner. HE is as popular as CLOWNS at a funeral; THE more efficient he is THE more his friends AVERT their faces-he AVERT their faces—he COULDN'T borrow a TEN-spot if his LIFE depended on it! IN rain and under hot SUN, he trudges along, and PERSPIRATION crawls ove DOWN military channels. EVER faithful, he is EVER cursed. EVER cursed.

AND there comes a
