

New Control Guide Vegetable Insects

For the benefit of Victory gardeners in North Carolina, the Extension Service of State College has issued War Series Extension Bulletin No. 13, which deals with vegetable insects and their control under present conditions. Many of the insecticides commonly known as K2ko cides commonly used in controlling garden insects are now very scarce says J. Myron Maxwell, author of the publication, and this means altered recommendations and the use of other materials.

In the publication the Extension entomologist gives directions for preparing insecticides. Descriptions of common insects attacking each vegetable are given and also the type of injury caused by each insect. Opposite the description of an insect can be found the method of control or prevention of damage with references to the type of dust or spray to be used. Thirteen formulas for insecticides and twenty-three different vegetables are covered in the information given.

A free copy of the publication may be obtained by writing the Agricultural Editor, N. C. State College, Raleigh.

MAKE IT WHOLE HOG

All God's chillun are not going to have shoes any longer in this country.

A directive that they be rationed, beginning at once, is issued.

Several factors play in the equation.

One of them is the scarcity of leather and that situation is due to the activities of the submarines which are sending shipments of this commodity from South America to the bottom of the sea.

Another is that the soldiers are requiring more shoes than had been anticipated, and, of course, they come first if all the others of us must take to bare feet.

For instance, soldiers in Africa took three pairs each with them and it is already demonstrated that this supply is insufficient.

The Army must hereafter figure on anywhere from six to 10 pairs each for every soldier in the ranks.

The mechanization and motorization of modern war has not lessened the demand for shoes for the soldiers. And soldiers without adequate shoes are of only limited usefulness.

Rationing of this commodity upon so short a notice only augments the argument that the government should go on, without further delay, and make up its mind, on the basis of what can at the moment be foreseen, to ration everything that is purchasable among the necessities.

The American people may as well be subjected to a whole-hog regime

Hershey Opposes Deferring Married Men From Draft

Washington, Feb. 11.—Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey today opposed legislation to require deferment of men with children until all single men and childless married men are drafted and said "the great majority of men" inducted in the next two or three months would be men with children.

The Director of Selective Service said he previously had testified that a lowering of the draft age to 18, which was done, would not meet demands of the armed forces for manpower, and added:

"In the next two or three months the great majority of men inducted will be men with children because there will be no one else left."

11 Out of 14 to Face Call
General Hershey submitted figures to back up his assertion. The total available manpower pool, including those already in service, he said, was 22,000,000, of which not less than 8,000,000 must be disregarded because of disability. Of the 14,000,000 remaining, he explained, an estimate of 11,000,000 for the armed services by the end of this year was "about as good as you can get." He said that approximately 1,500,000 must be deferred because of the needs of agriculture.

On that basis, General Hershey said, 11 out of 14 of all the men between the ages of 18 and 38 must be in the service by the end of this year, and that meant the use of many men with children.

While only from 8 to 10 per cent of men of all ages were rejected for physical defects by local boards, he said the rate of rejections at induction centers ran from 30 to 35 per cent. In most cases, he explained, rejections were caused by defective teeth or bad eyesight, although standards had been lowered considerably.

"We're not rejecting them, but the Army is rejecting them," he added.

When he said the rate of rejections in the 18-year-old group was from 20 to 25 per cent, Representative Robert G. Thompson (D) of Texas commented that it "is a sad commentary on health conditions throughout the country."

Occupation a Factor
General Hershey testified that "before the end of this year, the great majority of all men between 18 and 38 who are physically fit, regardless of their occupation or their dependency, must enter the service."

"You mean the military service?" asked Mr. Thompson.

"Yes," General Hershey replied. "I feel this legislation," said the General, "in its present form would render administration of selective service very difficult."

"The inevitable tendency of manpower procurement during the next eight or nine months, or even the two or three months," General Hershey said, "must give more weight to what the registrant is doing rather than to the relation he has with dependents."

He emphasized that he was expressing only "my personal opinion," and was not speaking for the War Manpower Commission.

of all-out rationing instead of being introduced to these imperative restrictions in piece-meal fashion. The sooner they are made to understand that total war requires total sacrifice, the better they will be able to acclimate themselves to the complete regimentation that is sure to be ahead.—The Charlotte Observer.

Adjustment, Not Shortage

RIGHT adjustment in human affairs does not involve shortage. When human thinking is kept in accord with the law of God, lack, limitation, and shortage must disappear. Proper adjustment in world conditions today can be made only through spiritual insight and an increased understanding of God's law of unending supply. Supply can be proved equal to demand, because in God's universe there is no shortage of good.

God's abundant supply never changes. It does not come and go with the tide of mortal thinking. God is abundantly pouring forth all good, and the real man is continually receiving this good. For proper human adjustment, thought must yield to the divine in every instance. Personal planning, ambitions, habits, and fixed rules of human conduct must accord with that which is best for the greatest number. An understanding of what constitutes reality will adjust any sense of shortage that would try to present itself. There is a right idea present and available to give us daily whatever to our limited sense of things seems essential for human use. In the thought which is tractable, spiritual, peaceable, these ideas will come to light.

Right adjustment, then, is spiritually mental adjustment to God's law. This adjustment relinquishes human will and selfishness and resigns all to the dear Father's tender, loving care. No shortage can occur from this adjustment, and many latent possibilities of increase will be brought into expression.

When our dear Master, Christ Jesus, discerned the human need of the multitude for food, after they had listened long to his preaching and he found that among them there were but five loaves and two fishes, he commanded that all be seated. "And when he had taken the five loaves and the two fishes, he looked up to heaven, and blessed, and brake the loaves. . . . And they did all eat, and were filled" (Mark 6:41, 42). To human sense, the visible supply seemed very inadequate, and there was much room for doubt as to the possibility of meeting the need. Nevertheless, the unending confidence of the Master and his recognition of infinite power put to silence any argument of limitation, and all accepted the increase without question.

Jesus did not entertain an argument of shortage. He did not question whether there was enough to go around. Neither did he consider what he would do when the supply was depleted. He knew that God was supplying the needs of all, and that this supply was at hand regardless of the testimony of mortal sense. "He looked up to heaven, and blessed, and brake the loaves." He looked to God, whose law was adequate to (4:28, 30), certain ones, "filled with wrath," attempted to destroy him, "but he passing through the midst of them went his way." Through his understanding of God as ever present and available, he was enabled to still a storm at sea, to heal all manner of disease instantaneously, and finally to overcome for himself the supposedly fatal effects of crucifixion and burial, and to rise superior to all the false claims of life in matter. Having done all these things through his understanding of God and of the real man in His likeness, he became for others the Way-shower, so that all might follow his example and overcome the ills that troubled them; and he not only promised but directed that those who should follow his example of complete reliance on God should prove the power of God in all their needs in their going out and their coming in. . . .

In "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of "but he passing through the midst of them went his way." Through his Christian Science, says (p. 387), "The history of Christianity furnishes sublime proofs of the supporting influence and protecting power bestowed on man by his heavenly Father, omnipotent Mind, who gives man faith and understanding whereby to defend himself, not only from temptation, but from bodily suffering."

This faith in God increases as one learns the true nature of God as divine Principle, infinite Mind, and of man in God's likeness, as His perfect, imperishable idea, inseparable from His source. . . .

All that God has made remains as harmonious as the Mind which formed real being. These spiritual facts, being scientific, are demonstrable, and when clearly and sufficiently understood, and utilized, prove the powerlessness and unreality of that which is unlike God, in whatever service one may be engaged. . . .

And long ago the Psalmist said of him who looks to God, seeking righteousness and wisdom (Psalms 37:31), "The law of his God is in his heart; none of his steps shall slide." —The Christian Science Monitor.

Bessie

"All right, Bessie," said the boss of the little factory which was making jackets for soldiers. "Did you want to see me about something?"

The thin middle-aged woman stood up from the chair in the outer office and looked earnestly at the boss with her huge, gray eyes.

"It's about this ten percent pledge," she began.

"Oh, that's all right, Bessie," the boss said. "I'd been meaning to speak to you about that. We don't expect you to pledge ten percent of your pay for War Bonds like the others are doing. We know you have a hard time making ends meet since Jake died. Eleven kids, isn't it? That's quite a lot of mouths to feed. Let's see, you make $25.50 a week including overtime, don't you?"

"Yes, sir, but . . ."

"The boss smiled. 'Don't give it another thought, Bessie. You've got your hands full now. Uncle Sam knows you haven't got a penny to spare. Don't let it worry you. We understand.'"

The boss turned to go back into his private office.

"But what I wanted to say was . . ." Bessie raised her voice and the boss looked around. "I wanted to say, would a dollar a week be too little? You see, after we get the living expenses paid, there's just about a dollar a week left. Would they be willing to accept a dollar a week?"

"They'd be more than willing," the boss said quietly. "They'd be proud."

Bessie looked relieved.

"All we have to do is scribble a little," she said. "I'd feel just terrible if we couldn't give something."

Back in the boss' office a representative of the Treasury Department was waiting. The boss shut the door and sat down.

"I've just seen the greatest single sacrifice I know of," the boss said. "Listen, if you want to hear what American women are made of . . ."
