POOLE'S MEDLEY

By D. SCOTT POOLE

It is alleged that the leaders or officers of labor unions are racketeers. A racket is an illegitimate business, a business which must be kept under cover. Union members pay dues and strike when so instructed. So they are not free men.

Take all the people of Hoke County, and we will suppose in this case one of them have any money. They have health, strength and intelligence sufficient to labor profitably. Everybody in the county is set for work, but they have no capital, no cash and no arrangements have been made to get money upon which business may be transacted.

Having had no experience they will find the business world outside is not willing to risk financing the business of the county, so everything stands still. But the more intelligent persons in the county of Hoke have a basis of credit in what is known as character.

They must be considered honest, intelligent and experienced business men, and they assume direction of the business of the county, and under their intelligent direction, the people of the county earn a living and double their wealth. Supervision—wise supervision, made this possible.

But, suppose labor concludes it has done it all, that the working man is the producer, and the laborers are entitled to all that is made, or produced, what is the result? The business of this county sits itself out. To provide the means to transact business, and to supervise the use of money furnished upon which business is done, is called capital.

Capitalist are accuse of gaining for themselves at the expense of workers-laborers. That is true, but, it is apparent labor union leaders are out for dues, instead of improving conditions of those who produce the wealth of the world, so, laborers are between the devil and bosses. They are charitable when there is distress. The others may be but that cannot be proven by me. I want to see living wages obtained by all who toil, and I want living prices for the products of labor, but I am not a friend to ironies.

Society maintained through the supervision of the assembled results of the labors of the whole populace of the community, must have regard for every other member of society as his superior, inferior or equal. Your brain force, neighbor, will reveal the position you occupy.

We have not all like gifts. It is our respective duties to find our capabilities, and supply society with whatever our gifts may enable us to do. We are not alike endowed with gifts. Find your gift, and use it for the enrichment of the world, and the edifying of humanity.

I do something to aid society as a whole, and society protects my life and property. No one lives to himself, nor dies to himself, says Saint Paul. We serve God by serving our fellow men. Nothing produces so much unhappiness as selfishness, and nothing makes folks so happy as making other folks happy—not if you are what you should be.

John Bruce, our nearest neighbor back on the old home farm, used to sit on his front piazza after he had finished his days work, singing in a voice that roared both up and down Drowning Creek. That helped him forget his fatigue. Mean folks do not sing.
