Of Interest to Farmers

State College Answers Timely Farm Questions

Q: What good crop can I plant to increase my feed supply?
 A: The Agronomists at State College say that alfalfa, which can be grown on fertile, medium-heavy, well-drained lands in all sections of North Carolina, will produce more tons of high quality hay per acre than any other legume crop. They advise a few acres on every farm. They also suggest that you put in an acreage of vetch or one of the clovers and don't forget an early sowing of barley, oats and rye for grazing. See your county agent for full instructions on growing alfalfa, because it is a crop that must be carefully sown by getting the land in the right condition, liming the land, and inoculating the seed.

Q: What is the best variety of barley for me to plant? I want to grow a "winter corn crop."
 A: Dr. E. R. Collins, in charge of Agronomy Extension at State College, advises that you plant Sunrise, Davidson, Randolph or Iredell for grain. If you are especially interested in grazing some, he suggests one of the last three mentioned. Sunrise is not recommended for grazing. Some years dry weather almost ruins your corn crop and under average conditions, barley has a better chance of making a good yield. In spite of the very hard winter, some growers have reported yields of fifty to sixty bushels of barley per acre this year.

Q: Are sunflower seed a good feed for poultry?
 A: Under existing feed shortages, Prof. Roy S. Dearstine of the Poultry Department at State College advises that sunflower seed can be fed in moderation along with scratch feeds for poultry. These seed are not being grown commercially as a source of poultry feed.

Plan Storage For Sweet Potatoes

Farmers should plan to cure their sweet potatoes and market them in an orderly manner or many thousands of bushels of this important food crop will be lost this next fall and winter, say horticultural specialists of the State College Extension Service.
 Recent estimates indicate that the total sweet potato acreage will probably be about one third larger than last year and, with anything like normal growing conditions, there will be a bumper crop. The officials point out that if the large crop is "dumped" on the market, without being properly harvested, graded and cured, the price support measures are bound to prove inadequate.
 It has been estimated that North Carolina has storage capacity for only about one-fourth of the coming crop and growers are urged to plan now for the proper handling and storing of the crop.

The Agricultural Engineering Department at State College has recently published plans for a small curing unit that will handle from 80 to 200 bushels and requests have been received for 743 blue prints in recent days. Thousands of bushels of potatoes are lost every year by farmers who depend on the "bank method" of saving the crop and the new plan will save enough potatoes to pay for the cost of building the small unit, which is placed on skids.

Growers wishing to build permanent storage units of 500 to 15,000 bushels should write the Agricultural Engineering Department, State College, Raleigh for free plans. This department also has plans for the conversion of tobacco barns into sweet potato curing plants.

Protect Grain With Carbon Bisulphide

Stored grain may be treated with carbon bisulphide to prevent damage from weevils and bran bugs, says J. Myron Maxwell, in charge of Extension Entomology at N. C. State College. Weevils are the most injurious because they attack the sound grains. Bran bugs can cause the grain to heat and they feed on the cracked grains. Maxwell recommends that a fairly air tight bin or room be used for fumigation. During the fumigation process, the grain should be confined to a small space and piled from four to six feet deep. The carbon bisulphide should be applied directly to the top surface of the grain and about three gallons per 1,000 bushels of grain is sufficient, according to the entomologist.
 The storage space needs to be closed immediately after applying the fumigant so that the stored grain can be left under treatment for 24 to 48 hours before it is necessary to air out the storage space.
 It should be remembered that the carbon bisulphide is explosive and highly inflammable. No flames should be brought near it.
 The grain should be examined at monthly intervals and the fumigation process be repeated at the first signs of insect activity.
 For further information on controlling insects in stored grains, interested growers should write to the Extension Entomologist at State College, Raleigh.

WHEAT
 No wheat marketing quotas will apply for the 1944 marketing year and no payments will be conditioned upon meeting or planting within goals, say extension officials at N. C. State College.

PRESSURE CANNERS
 The WPB has reported that production of steam pressure canners is slower than had been anticipated. The program called for 275,000 and about 123,000 were completed by August 1.

FERTILIZERS
 Fertilizer manufacturers will have to manufacture their goods on a twelve month basis, because of unusual conditions, and farmers will have to buy earlier than usual to help clear the plants.

MILK
 Milk, butter, cheese, ice cream and other dairy products annually create an output valued at 5.1-2 billion dollars. One out of every 15 families in the U. S. is dependent on milk for a livelihood.

COTTON
 Mississippi is the only state having a larger cotton acreage in 1943 than in 1942. North Carolina has planted below her permitted acreage.

HOGS
 Farmers are asked to market hogs at not heavier than 230 pounds. It takes more feed to put an extra pound on heavy hogs.

CANNING
 Home canners are warned that "canning powders" and other chemical preservatives should not be used in home canning, say Home Demonstration officials at State College.

Miss Hall Gives Report In July

Eleven home demonstration clubs met in Hoke county in July. The meetings were attended by 126 club women. "Busy Day Meals" was the major project. Scalloped soup mixture and fruit cobbler were prepared and served at the meetings.
 There has never been a greater demand for assistance with canning, the borrowing of pressure cookers and general interest in food preservation. The four pressure cookers loaned from the home agent's office have been in constant use during the month. Hundreds of jars of food have been canned in these four cookers alone. Mrs. J. A. Newton, who borrowed a pressure cooker for the Wayside community women to use for a week said, "I don't think the cooker got cold all the time we had it."
 Mrs. Alton Potter, a Rockfish club member, has assisted every person in her neighborhood with canning. She and Mrs. J. H. Plummer also brought Mrs. Potter's pressure cooker to Raeford where they assisted several women in town.
 Mrs. N. H. G. Balfour reports that the tenants on their farm are canning one day a week at the Balfour cannery.

The community canning center in Raeford is being patronized by the town and county women. Three groups, one from Rockfish, one from Ashmont, and one from Mildouson, have used the cannery for preserving vegetables for the lunch rooms at their respective schools.
 The Arabia club invited a group from the Dundarraeh community to their club meeting. Plans were made at the time to can for the Mildouson lunch room. After the meeting a delightful picnic supper was enjoyed. The Rockfish club women voted to can the school lunch room each Wednesday in August instead of having an August picnic.

 144 more Red Cross Kit Bags were shipped from the home Agent's office during July.
 A shower was given for one of the Little River club members at the July meeting. 97 library books were checked to club members at the meetings.
 Recommendations for Fall Gardens were sent to all club members in July. Hoke county should have many fine fall gardens and now is the time for many of the crops to be planted.
 Josephine Hall,
 Home Agent.

PICK HUNDRED CITIES

CHICAGO — Three Methodist bishops go into a huddle over a U. S. map to select 100 key cities for 100 January mass meetings in their coming Crusade for a New World Order. They have just been appointed by the Council of Bishops meeting here to lead a drive for a flow of personal letters to legislators expressing faith in a post-war world to be organized on principles of international collaboration. Without this the bishops fear a return to isolationism and power politics. The officers of the Crusade shown are (right) Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, Boston, chairman; (left) Bishop Paul B.
