

From PULPWOOD, to Paper, to Victory

FIRST of a picture series illustrating the many uses of pulpwood paper and its role in the war. Workers of the Ammunition Container Corporation plant, a subsidiary of the American Can Company, apply sections of paper stock onto winding device that feeds paper rolls over glue applicators. These strips are in turn formed into sturdy tubes of protective shell, food and medical supply containers. More pulpwood will keep these containers rolling and filled.

Cotton Ginning Drops Sharply Over 1942

The October 1st ginning report of the Department of Commerce shows that cotton ginning in Hoke county has dropped sharply in comparison with sales ginned by the same date last season.

8658 bales were ginned to that date as compared with the 1942 report of 7126.

The grade this season, however, according to ginners throughout the county, is very much better than for a number of years, with a large percentage of this year's crop well within the top three grades.

What The Soldiers Think Of The War Fund Campaign

The Nyack, N. Y. Journal News sent its inquiring reporter out to interview soldiers, asking the following question:

"Do you want the folks back home to contribute to the National War Fund drive?"

Replies were published as follows:

Pvt. John Kelly, North Carolina: Yes, if they can do it. I think it will help us win the war if those back home do what they can to assist our Allies and other people who are in distress.

Pvt. Robert W. Spear, Massachusetts: Yes, because through the USO, the National War Fund is doing a lot of good for the fellows in this country as well as overseas. And when the occupation takes place, the good that has been done by the war fund agencies to foreign countries will make it easier for us.

Pvt. Orval R. Kauf, California: Certainly I do, and more than ever now that I'm in the army. I know how much good the USO does, which is one of the 17 services of the National War Fund, and I assume that the other services do equally well in their various fields.

Cpl. Dan Johnston, Nebraska: Yes, because it will bring the war to a faster conclusion and save a lot of needless deaths.

Pvt. Mario Marino, Massachusetts: Yes, because by supporting the National War Fund we will greatly help to bring about closer harmony between the different countries who will benefit from it. And that, in turn will help prevent a repetition of the last war, such as we're now living through.

New Blackshank Resistant Tobacco Seed Available

On the basis of favorable reports by farmers who have grown the new blackshank resistant tobacco, a limited supply of seed is available from different growers and perhaps from the Tobacco Branch Station at Oxford.

E. G. Moss, assistant director in charge of the Oxford Tobacco Station, says T. M. Lewis of Walnut Cove, Route 2, has been growing this tobacco on his farm for the Experiment Station for the past ten years. This year he grew enough to supply some seed for the immediate demand only.

Last year, the Oxford station released 300 pounds of the seed to Rockingham, Guilford and Forsyth county farmers to be grown by them as a field demonstration. The majority of the growers were well pleased with its resistance, yield and quality, Moss says.

Any grower who would like further information on the performance of this tobacco may write his county agent in any of the sections in which it has been grown and ask to be put in touch with one of the farmers who has raised it as part of the experiment.

These agents are, Fred Walker, Reidsville; R. W. Poul, Winston-Salem; or J. I. Wagener, Greensboro. The new tobacco strain gave from 80 to 100 per cent control of the black shank disease in these counties.

Sgt. Herbert C. Gillis has returned to Winter Garden, Florida after spending a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Gillis of the Antioch community.
