

Maxton Air Base

 "There is no finer duty than an American woman can undertake for her homeland."

"Laurinburg-Maxton Army Air Base salutes the Women's Army Corps."

Sunday, December 12, has been designated by Maj. Gen. Barney M. Giles, Chief of the Air Staff, Army Air Forces, as "Army Air Forces Salute The WAC Day" and special programs will be held at more than 180 AAF installations where Wacs are stationed.

This special day has been set aside as the AAF's way of letting its women soldiers know it appreciates the work they are doing.

Because of the nature of its work, the AAF has many peculiarly important jobs, involving directly in its most essential activities, which women

Yes, Virginia . . .
 St. Helena, Ore., Dec. 7—Benjamin F. Carter, 34, scheduled for trial soon on charges of burglary, car theft and forgery, handed the sheriff a letter to Santa Claus. It asked for a dozen hatchet blades, a long rope, and a 16-cylinder car with a tank full of gas. Carter is gone now. He sawed his way out. Maybe there was a 16-cylinder car waiting, but officers don't know.

can do—and are doing—with skill equal to that of men.

These tasks include operation of control towers, where directions are given for takeoffs and landings; instruction in "Link trainers," enclosed models of airplane cockpits in which instrument flying is learned; parachute rigging and packing, radio repair, operation of mobile radio units, various phases of aerial photography, weather observation and forecasting, mechanical work on airplanes and armament, clerical and stenographic work.
