We'd like to thank our customers for conserving electricity.

Recent severe weather has caused all of us a great deal of concern. Despite all the hardship and inconvenience, it's times like this that often bring out the best in people. One example is the recent conservation effort made by our customers.

Although record low temperatures pushed demands for electricity to record highs, your conservation efforts helped us meet needs throughout the critical period. And while you were doing your part, we were working hard to do ours.

Our employees worked around the clock to meet customers needs, backed by our nuclear units that have provided over 40% of the electricity we've generated during the cold snap.

Winter may still hold a few surprises; but, if everyone responds to the need to conserve electricity during peak periods as they did during the recent extreme weather, we'll be better able to meet your electric needs no matter what the winter may have in store.
