

LAW For Laypersons

North Carolina's law requiring its State drivers to be responsible for placing their children in a restraint system in their car will become effective July 1, 1982. It will apply to all licensed North Carolina drivers who are operating their own motor vehicle or family purpose vehicle and who have as passengers in their own cars children who are two years old or younger. The restraint used by North Carolina drivers must be one that is approved by the North Carolina Commission of Motor Vehicles.

There are several instances when the act does not apply. For example, if the child is not occupying a position where seat safety belts are required by federal law, there will be no need to place the child in a safety restraint system. In addition, if the child is one year old or older and is secured by a safety belt already installed in the car, the act will also not apply. If the vehicle is registered in another state or if the vehicle is an ambulance or an emergency vehicle, the act will again not apply. Finally, if the child's personal needs are being met or if all positions equipped with passenger restraint systems or safety belts are occupied, the act will also not apply.

What kind of teeth did the legislature put in this act to make sure that all North Carolina drivers will comply? The act provides for a warning ticket to be issued from July 1, 1982 until June 30, 1984. From July 1, 1984 until June 30, 1985, a fine of $10 will be levied against violators, but a violation will not be accompanied by the assessment of insurance points. When June 30 of 1985 rolls around, it will be interesting to see whether North Carolinians have complied willingly with this new act and whether the act is effective in doing what our legislators hoped it would do; reducing death and injury to children in car accidents.

LIFE INSURANCE

After graduation from college there are several decisions to be made. And one might have to do with life insurance. For example, does a recent graduate need life insurance? After all, the main purpose is to give protection to those who would suffer financially by your death.

And if you're a typical graduate, that is an unmarried person starting your first job, your death probably would not have a major financial impact.

However, if you're less typical, that is married with children, or helping with dependent parents, the picture becomes more complicated. Life insurance may be the only way to protect those dependents. There are two other reasons why a graduating senior may need life insurance. One is to pay funeral expenses. The other is guaranteed insurability -- a clause that allows you to buy insurance in the future, even if you become uninsurable due to a health problem.

TRAVEL LIGHT
There's no doubt about it. Traveling light is the best way to go. And among those worry-free packing hints are these: Choose easy-care, wrinkle resistant separates that can be mixed and matched so that a few garments can add up to several looks. Then use accessories to dress up or dress down an outfit. Take along detergent or soap for quick washbasin laundering. Keep in mind a spot remover can help you take care of accidental spots and stains almost right away. Here's another tip.

Instead of carrying heavy bottles and jars of toiletries and cosmetics, transfer needed amounts into small, reusable plastic containers. As you pack, place shoes and heavy items against suitcase hinges so they are less likely to sink and crush delicate items.

And cushion any breakable items. Fold your garments smoothly to help prevent wrinkling. And use your available space wisely by filling holes with small items, such as stockings and underwear. If you make a checklist in advance, it will help you in planning what you need to take and it can keep you from forgetting to pack something important.

ENERGY SAVING WAYS
With AUTOMATIC DRYERS

- Dry clothes in consecutive loads. This cuts down on the energy consumption required to heat up the unit, plus, an already warm dryer shortens drying time.
- Dry full loads—but don't overload. Clothes that can tumble freely will dry faster and with fewer wrinkles.
- Sort clothing into loads of light or heavy fabrics for the most efficient and fastest drying.
- Make use of your automatic drying cycle if your dryer has one. This cycle shuts the machine off when it senses that the clothing is dry, avoiding overdrying and energy waste.
