Choral Society Names Selections

One of the most striking things about the repertoire chosen for the Christmas concert of the Moore County Choral Society is that the music of the Baroque era has been given a back seat for this concert and music of the twentieth century has taken the bulk of the program. This is extraordinary in view of the public response to "modern" music today. But here there is a very important difference in that the styles of the music have a comfortably familiar feeling about them.

The earliest work to be performed by the Choral Society will be the Magnificat in C by Franz Schubert. Written in 1816 when Schubert was 19, the setting shows perfectly the knowledge of Baroque and Classical styles found in the late works by Haydn and Mozart. The outlying movements of the Magnificat show the traditional side of Schubert while the middle movement for solo vocal quartet, with its harmonic wrestling make us understand that here was a composer of individually and intelligence.

Next in the chronology is the Fantasia on Christmas Carols by Ralph Vaughan-Williams from the year 1912. Vaughan-Williams was one of the greatest of the "folk-song" composers, meaning that he sought out and used English folk-songs in many of his greatest works with stunning success. The Fantasia uses four carols of varying familiarity and weaves them through the solo baritone part to create a feeling of pageantry. Vaughan-Williams also puts in fragments of well known carols in the accompaniment at odd times so it is a very good idea to listen as carefully as possible to every thing that is in the music.

Healy Willan was a great Canadian organist and composer who died in the late 1960's and left behind a huge amount of organ music and choral music. The next work in the Choral Society concert program chronology is an anthem entitled "The Three Kings" written in 1928. The work is for chorus a capella and here as in the Vaughan-Williams piece the listener is transported through the ages to the site of the Nativity just as the three Magi arrive to see the Child. The chorus is divided into many parts to give the work a symphonic feeling, going from the softest whisper as if not to disturb the sleeping infant, to a burst of royal grandeur as the three enter the room.

The 1960's are represented by two collections of well known carols by Normal Luboff and John Rutter. In the hands of these two masters of choral arranging, the usual becomes extraordinary. Rutter delights in giving a melody a seemingly out of place accompaniment just to prove that it will work to perfection in the new setting. A real highlight of the set is the "Twelve Days of Christmas" in which everybody treats it like a hot potato, tossing it here and there with total abandon. Norman Luboff is slightly more traditional but every bit as inventive in his settings of "Adeste Fideles," "Silent Night" and "A La Nanita Nana."

Finally, there is the most recent composition on the program, "Make We Joy" by Edwin Fissinger written in 1978. This is a professional type anthem that uses the choir as both singers and orchestra with the men imitating drums and the women sounding trumpet calls. The text has three languages interspersed with a unique feeling of old and new.

The Moore County Choral Society Christmas concert will be truly a concert for the modern day and a delight to all who come to hear these singers celebrate the Christmas season. Tickets can be bought from any Choral Society member in advance of the concert date: Dec. 5 at 4 and 8 p.m. in the Cardinal Room, Pinehurst Hotel.
