Southern National backing regional interstate banks

The Southern National Bank of North Carolina, who operates a branch in Raeford, will maintain support of regional interstate banking, according to Chairman Hector MacLean.

Speaking recently at Southern National Corporation annual meeting in Lumberton, MacLean said the bank's management has adopted a posture in favor of reciprocal banking arrangements

New at Burlington Donald E. "Don" Hosea joined the Burlington Menswear Dyeing Plant on April 4 as Assistant Personnel Manager. Don is a recent graduate of the University of Georgia with a Bachelor of Business Administration degree in Personnel/Human Resources Management. While there, he was also president of the local chapter of the American Society for Personnel Administration.

with states in the Southeast.

"We're not worried about being gobbled up by other banks in other states," said MacLean. "Our bank visualizes a goal of being a sur-vivor bank, willing and able to compete in markets in North Carolina and beyond."

MacLean further noted that this position is in the best interest of the shareholders, "We believe that no other bank's stock will outperform that of Southern National." In other business transacted today, stockholders moved to amend the corporation's articles of incorporation and bylaws to provide for the election of one-third of the Board members each year. Members will now serve staggered three-year terms rather than one year at the time

Carolina Telephone helps victims of March tornado

Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company donated $15,000 to the tornado relief fund that was coordinated by Raleigh radio station WPTF.

Wayne Peterson, company president, said, "Our company feels an obligation to contribute to a fund to assist the many unfor-tunate people who were victims of the tragic tornadoes of March 28. While our company suffered extensive property damage, that is not the same nor as important as the personal losses suffered by individuals, including some of our employees.

The tornadoes that hit Eastern Carolina knocked out telephone service for 1,915 customers, damaged a work center at Red Springs, and broke down 138 telephone poles. The company's total damage cost is estimated at $750,000.

Peterson said, "Our company

Parent involvement is concern for HHS student FHA Club

The involvement of parents has been a major concern of the Hoke High School FHA Club during the school year of 1983-84.

Night programs with guest speakers from the local community and neighboring counties have provided additional insight into courses related to the Home Economics program. Parents have been invited to each of these night programs which have included: --Jodi Willis, Health Educator-Hoke County Health Department, gave a film presentation on the growing concern of "Teenage Suicide";

-Helen Mouton, Consultant-Belk Tallywood, Fayetteville, presented a program on "Personal Grooming" with an emphasis on applying and removing make-up;

-Christmas buffet with club members, parents, club advisors, and special guests.

Spring programs will include "Shaping Up for Spring," with an emphasis on nutrition and exer-cise. The Mother-Daughter-Son banquet in May will conclude an activity year with club member's

Kindergarten registration urged

Parents of childroen who will be five years old on or before October 16, 1984, are asked to report to the elementary school in their school district to register children for kindergarten.

The dates for the registrations are from April 2 through April 20.

Everything's coming up dogwoods -- and redbuds and forsythia and crabapples -- at the North Carolina Zoological Park near Asheboro.

That's the nature of the zoo in spring.

"Zoo Fling," a month-long April celebration, will be a garden party featuring the whole bloomin' zoo -- especially the plant life. On tap are plant tours of the zoo grounds and the R.J. Reynolds Forest Aviary, arts and crafts, storytelling, bluegrass music and other spring delights.

possibilities are endless," he says. Every weekday during April, a member of the zoo's education staff will conduct a one-hour plant tour beginning at 1 p.m. in the zoo plaza. Tours will emphasize not only types of plants at the zoo, but how they are used to create the outdoor habitats and their con-tribution to the animals' wellbeing-from the pampas grass in the lion habitat to the willow oaks in the elephant and rhinoceros exhibits. On weekends, aviary plant tours will be given every 20 minutes from 1 p.m. to 2:30 p.m.

On Sunday, April 15, learn everything you always wanted to know about photographing plants and animals with Burlington resident Lee Roane, a Technical College of Alamance photography instructor and marketing consultant with a Burlington camera shop.

One-hour photo sessions begin at 10 a.m. with a bird and plant class in the R.J. Reynolds Forest Aviary. At 1 p.m., Roane will lecture in the zoo amphitheater, then take the class to photograph blooming plants. At 3 p.m., visitors can catch monkey shines at Baboon Island, while Roane tells how to get the best animal shot.

On Saturday, April 21, the Randolph County Garden Clubs will demonstrate flower-arranging in the amphitheater from 2-3 p.m.

"Zoo Fling" will wind up with a musical bang -- the foot stompin' music of Chapel Hill's Red Clay Ramblers.

Something forEveryone

An informed public is essential to a democratic society such as ours. Whether it is news of the community, the state or the world, it is important that the newspaper contains something of interest for each generation - teenagers, adults and senior citizens. Grade school students learn how to read the newspaper and make use of the wealth of information it provides regurlarly. As they grow older, their points of interest change. Whether they use their newspaper as the source of information about politics, entertainment, opinions, advertised products and services or current ideas, it is important that there is "something for everyone" on a regular basis. To safeguard a democratic society, reporters, editorial writers and all departments of newspaper publishing must make available the information vital to sustain this free nation.
