

Touring Raeford

About 100 West Hoke students toured businesses in Raeford on Friday. Here Martha Upchurch (seated) explains the idiosyncrasies of a type setting machine to one group of students. The pupils also visited the Employment Security Office, the Post Office, the Board of Education office and the Hoke County Public Library.

went into the store, robbed it and blindfolded the victim making her go along with them, the statement said.
Johnson and the victim left in her car, said Powell.
Johnson drove the car to the road on which the victim was later found and, after raping her, left the scene with Sinclair and Boyd in the car they were driving, said the statement.
The three defendants appeared emotionless during the sentencing;

however, afterwards, the 25-year-old Boyd asked if she could see her children before being sent to jail.
Superior Court Judge Edwin S. Preston granted the motion provided that the grandparents, who were present in the courtroom, had the children there by 1 p.m. Wednesday, May 16.
The defendants were to leave for prison at that time.
Preston also said that he would consider a motion for work release for the prisoners when they are eligible.

... Around Town

on the top floor a Chapel. English speaking families needed a place for worship and the doctors and nurses needed a place for their devotionals. So, it was through the waiting room of the hospital that we and 16 others walked on our way to work each day for two weeks. The men working on the new addition, where they put a suspended ceiling in the Chapel, wired, plumbed and did finishing work in all the area. Four women went on to the nursing department where we painted and papered walls of the offices and instruction room. Two women helped the wife of the missionary make lunch for the crew each day (it was brought to the work site) and do the laundry for everyone.

gringo or tourist section of the city, but the hotel was very nice with swimming pool and beautiful gardens. The staff at the hotel became our friends and they were most eager to please. The delicious fresh pineapple juice and coffee at breakfast made up for the potatoes and rice at dinner. On Sunday we ate at a restaurant, Ali Baba and the Forty Chickens, and were served filet mignon for $3.00. Beef is very cheap - if only we could know whether it came from the open air market or the refrigerated grocery market.

"It was rather hard to relax the first week. On May 1st, their Labor Day, the Minister of Justice was assassinated and the streets seemed filled with machine gun-carrying men. Some of our group said this posed no more danger than getting to and from hospital to work each day. Imagine hundreds of busses and taxis vying for their place in the lane of traffic only to have to stop for a donkey cart laden with bananas, mangoes or yucas. Most of the cars were of the 50's vintage and if one broke down while in route, that's where it was repaired. Everyone had to dodge it. It's quite all right to drive the wrong way on a one-way street as long as you turn your lights on in the day time and turn them off at night. We were advised not to ride the busses and kidnapping was not out of the question since they believe all North Americans are rich, so we waited for the convenience of the missionary vans for our transportation.
"Our quarters were not in the "All schools are private and operate 2 shifts per day. Students wear uniforms and fill the busses to overflowing. State University was closed two years ago due to insufficient funds. Some members of our group went to the "barrios" (a very poor section) and white-washed a two room cinderblock school that the parents had saved their money to build. They couldn't afford private schools and at present can't afford desks or books. The missionary nurses learned about the school on her rounds of checking the children for vaccination.

"There are many pleasant memories of the South American visit. Just after siesta, we were fascinated by the women in their colorful dresses and sandals walking down the sidewalks with their huge dishpans filled with candy, pineapple, melons or fresh baked bread, balanced on their heads. "The hospital employees who greeted us each day, bewildered because we were volunteering to work on our vacation; waiters at the hotel who were proud to learn 4 things, "good morning," "good night," "thank you" and "friend," and the appreciation on the faces of those who worshipped in the new chapel."

In an apparently unrelated break-in last Monday, Kenneth Julian Barnes, of the Rockfish area, reported that he and his wife returned home from work to find that someone had entered their house.
Sheriff's reports say that the intruders had used some sort of tool to open the back door of the house and gain entry.
A microwave oven worth about $400, two black and white television sets valued at about $300, a $450 stereo, an AM-FM clock radio, a $50 camera, and assorted jewelry were said to be missing when the victims got home.
Sheriff's deputies are investigating this matter.

In still another reported burglary, a Rt.1, Raeford house trailer was said to have been victimized last Friday between the hours of 2 and 2:30 p.m.
According to Wesley Hollingsworth, the apparent thieves took his $450 color TV and touched nothing else.
The victim reported seeing a green Nova near his house around the time of the break-in.
Deputies were looking into the matter Tuesday.
Last Friday, Emma J. Woods, of Lumber Bridge, reported that her home had been unlawfully entered and her 19-inch color television set and pocketbook had been taken.

The sheriff's report said that her pocketbook had been found in Cumberland County and returned to her.
On the following Saturday, Millie Melvin reported that her home had been entered and a set of stereo speakers, at an unreported value, had been stolen.
Police reports show that last Wednesday, the Buck Stop on the 401 by-pass was hit for over eight gallons of gas.

Reports say that a car pulled up to the pumps, got $10.20 worth of gas, and left without paying for it.
In other police reports, Neil Senter, of Raeford reported the theft of his 1980 Chevrolet Cavalier last Sunday morning.
The car was found on Main Street in Raeford that same morning with the keys in the ignition and nothing missing from inside.
Reports say that the $4,000 vehicle did not even have any gas burned out of it.
