

Removing culprit
William Gregory, Lumbie River EMC lineman, removes the chicken snake that plunged over 2,500 rural members of the co-op around the Red Springs area into darkness Saturday from 10 p.m. to 11:30 p.m. The snake, in trying to reach a bird nest, crossed a transformer after crawling straight up the utility pole for 25 feet.

4-H'ers to attend Carolina congress

Eight 4-H'ers from Hoke County will be joining other 4-H'ers, leaders, and extension agents from across the state at the 1984 N.C. 4-H Congress in Raleigh July 16-20.

The event climaxes another year of 4-H work for the delegates. They will participate in a tight schedule of contests, discussions, workshops, and the election of state 4-H council officers.

The congress will be held at N.C. State University's McKimmon Center and the Scott Building at the State Fairgrounds. Delegates will reside in NCSU dormitories.

The congress officially opens Monday night with a flag ceremony, 4-H Honor Club tapping, 75th anniversary of 4-H celebration, a concert and dance.

On Tuesday some 30 contestants will be held to pick state winners. The winners will be announced at an evening assembly.

The state 4-H "entertains" talent show and a dance are scheduled afterwards.

An assembly and workshops are set for Wednesday morning and the delegates will have a free afternoon.

A donor-winner banquet and the 4-H performing arts revue are scheduled Wednesday night.

The Thursday program is filled with an assembly, workshops, volunteer leader luncheon, visual newsletter and dance.

Attending from Hoke County are Leah Hendrix, Melissa Pratt, Patrick Miller, Troy LaBombard, Junior Johnson, Alvey Miller, Mark Campbell, and Bobby Hancock.

Three county youths win at 4-H district

Hoke County had three district winners at the 4-H Southeastern District Activity Day held recently near Kinston.

Junior Johnson was declared district winner in junior archery division; Patrick Miller was named district winner in senior archery; and Troy LaBombard was named district winner in bowhunters archery division. They are all members of the Rockfish 4-H Club and were coached by James Culp, 4-H volunteer leader of the club. They receive a $50 scholarship to N.C. 4-H Congress.

Patrick, Junior and Troy will be competing in state demonstration finals at N.C. 4-H Congress July 17.

How to plan summer camp
Ask questions before junior selects a summer camp. Talk to experienced parents. Interview the prospective camp representative. Brief your children on possible homesickness, expected camp environment, and behavior requirements.
Also, make certain you have health and accident insurance. Be sure the camp employs a registered nurse, or doctor, and that many of its staff members are certified in first aid.
Just as you choose your pharmacy carefully, select your child's camp. Enjoy their absence with greater peace of mind, this summer.
