

Have mercy!
Jonie C. Pate certainly has something to be proud of. He grew this two pound whopping tomato in his garden just off 401 business near Raeford. Pate must be doing something right in his garden because he offered to give this monster away saying, "I grow them like this all the time." It is hoped Pate, his family and his friends love tomatoes.

Community services board seeking comments on plan

The Board of Directors of Four-County Community Services, Inc. is seeking comments on the agency's proposed work plan for the program year beginning November 1.

Copies of this plan together with the Planning Narrative, Multi-Year Goals and Evaluation Procedure are available for review at the Cameron Heights Neighborhood Center and the Bowmore Neighborhood Center.

McRae attends Scout Seminar

Hattie M. McRae of Raeford was one of approximately 60 adult Girl Scout volunteers from North Carolina participating in a Management Seminar at Appalachian State University, Boone.

The volunteers, representing seven Girl Scout councils, hold positions of Service Unit Manager, a key volunteer position within the framework of every council.

Objectives of the conference was to provide the opportunity to improve management skills that will increase effectiveness as a Service Unit Manager.

Consultants covered such topics as Public Speaking, Communication Skills, Time Management, Team Building, Recruitment Techniques and Supervising and Delegating.

Cook promoted

Yolanda M. Cook, daughter of Dorothy W. Cook of E. Prospect Ave., Raeford, has been promoted in the U.S. Army to the rank of specialist four.

Cook is an administrative specialist at Fort Eustis, Virginia, with the U.S. Army Transportation Center.
