Keep "cool" to avoid heatstroke
Heatstroke is a life-threatening emergency striking at the elderly, athletes of all ages, and infants. It's severe for the elderly and hot-weather athletes.
A well-advised treatment is the reduction of high temperature. Ice-water baths, with massage of the extremities, is recommended.
Prevention is common sense. Avoid rubber sweat suits in hot weather. Plenty of water, or fluids should be on-hand while exercising, or working. An adequate salt intake with meals is advised. Pace yourself at work and exercise. Stay on the "cool side" of summer.
