Growing to serve

Harry Teal (bottom left) talks over plans for the next step, as a painter works, during the expansion that is ongoing at the Raeford offices of Dickson Press. The 20% expansion is taking in the front of the same building just next door to the press. The rear half of the same building has been a part of the company for some time. The large box in the background is a new piece of processing equipment that will allow The News-Journal and other Dickson Press publications to handle a larger load faster.

Suggestion Winner

Eugene Lee is the Safety Suggestion Winner at the Burlington Raeford Plant for the month of August. For the Safety Suggestion Eugene will receive a $25 gift certificate toward a purchase in the Burlington Employee Store, a fire extinguisher and reserved parking space for a month. Suggestion-Flood lights need to be installed on back dock wall to shine inside the trailers. This will give better visibility for employees loading and unloading trailers, thus helping prevent injury.

In the 1800s, before railroads carried U.S. mail out West, camels were shipped from Egypt to move mail and supplies across the hot, dry Southwest deserts. It took some getting used to, but the 60 or so camels, known as the U.S. Camel Corps, proved worthy of the task.
