Bill Hefner
Incumbent Eighth District Congressman William G. Hefner is campaigning hard to hold on to his seat. In recent months Hefner has made several trips to Hoke County and has said he is looking for federal projects to assist this county. Hefner recently supported cost-of-living raises for Social Security recipients, but otherwise has maintained a conservative fiscal posture.

Harris Blake
Pinehurst businessman Harris D. Blake is attempting to unseat incumbent Eighth District Congressman Rep. William Hefner. Blake says the number one concern of the campaign is jobs. He has taken strong stands for imposing restrictions on textile imports. He supports the Reagan Administration's economic policies.

Jesse Helms
Monroe native Sen. Jesse A. Helms is seeking his third term representing North Carolina. The 63-year-old Helms broke the record on campaign spending for the race, which he began over 18 months ago. His effort for re-election will cost more than $14 million. "I fight for what I believe," Helms said recently.

Jim Hunt
Two-term Governor Jim Hunt is hoping to unseat incumbent Republican Senator Jesse Helms on November 6. Hunt says he plans to work for a healthy and competitive economy which will create jobs and opportunities for North Carolina residents.

Republicans offer reward for info on voter fraud

Republican National Committee (RNC) Chairman Frank J. Fahrenkopf Jr., recently announced a program offering a $5,000 reward to any individual who provides information leading to the arrest, conviction and punishment of any election official who violates state or federal laws against voting fraud.

"Unfortunately, vote fraud still exists in several areas of this country," said Fahrenkopf. "The right to vote -- the cornerstone of all other rights which we Americans cherish -- should not be undermined by those who seek to take unfair advantage at the ballot box on election day."

Fahrenkopf sent a letter to all 50 secretaries of state asking for their cooperation in providing a contact person "in the event such occurrence" takes place in a particular state.

In addition to the reward program, the RNC also is providing legal assistance by placing attorneys at phones to answer complaints and to help callers contact the proper state and federal officials.

The reward program and legal assistance is part of a comprehensive ballot integrity program, called "Honest Vote 1984," which is sponsored by the Republican National Committee, National Republican Congressional Committee, National Republican Senatorial Committee and Reagan-Bush '84.

This program will provide ballot integrity information and support in all 50 states, with special emphasis on geographical areas which have a history of voting irregularities.

The program, administered through the RNC Chief Counsel's office, "will help to ensure an honest, fair and accurate count of this year's votes," said Fahrenkopf.

McFadyen endorses Hunt

Neill L. McFadyen, former member of the State House from Raeford, today endorsed Governor Jim Hunt in his race for the U.S. Senate, saying, "I know that Jim Hunt's priorities as Senator will be the same he has had as Governor -- progress for North Carolina, jobs, better schools, protecting Social Security and Medicare, and working for better opportunities for all people."

"I intend to cast a vote I can be proud of, and I hope the people of Hoke County will do the same," he said.

"We must cast a vote that says we in North Carolina care about people, and we don't duck our responsibilities to people, from the very young to the very old.

"Cast a vote that says we know the difference between hard-nosed fiscal responsibility and hard-hearted policies that favor the rich.

"Cast a vote that says we in North Carolina are committed to progress, to more jobs, to economic growth, to better education, to protecting Social Security and Medicare.

"I'm supporting Jim Hunt because he wants to represent the very best in North Carolina," McFadyen said.

"Let's all join together and show this state at its best and help lead this nation."

Marvin Johnson joins Reagan-Bush campaign

Donald E. Brock, National Chairman of Farmers and Ranchers for Reagan-Bush '84, recently announced the appointment of Raeford agricultural business executive Marvin Johnson as a member of the National Agricultural Business Advisory Committee for Reagan-Bush '84.

As a member of the Committee, Johnson will play a key role in the national effort to enlist support of voters in agriculturally related businesses and industries for the re-election of President Reagan and Vice President Bush.

In making the announcement, Brock said, "We are happy to welcome Marvin Johnson to our National Agricultural Advisory Committee. This group brings together many American leaders in the production, processing and distribution of our nation's agricultural products. Their support will be an invaluable element in our campaign to reinforce what the farmers and ranchers already know -- that they and the entire nation will benefit from four more years of Ronald Reagan's leadership."

The National Agricultural Business Advisory Committee is an adjunct of Farmers and Ranchers for Reagan-Bush '84, which is mobilizing support for the President's re-election from the entire range of farm and ranch voters.
