Christmas decorations highlight Jordan home

The home of Mrs. Jeanette Jordan will be filled with Christmas spirit for the December 2 Christmas Home Tour and Craft Show sponsored by the Raeford Junior Woman's Club.

Christmas decorations on the tree will be Christmas ornaments stitched and made by Mrs. Jordan's daughters, Anna and Kelly. Crismons are Christian symbols. As tree ornaments, they bring attention to the religious significance of the holidays.

The Jordan home was built sixteen years ago. Its furnishings are traditional and Country English. The love of home has created needlework touches. The piano bench cover and the dining room chairs are the needlepoint creations of the late Dr. Julius Jordan. Paintings by Anna, Kelly and their brother, Franklin, are hanging throughout the house.

The sunporch, a solarium in the winter and a living and dining area in the summer, is a nice feature of this house. Tourgoers will see family portraits and photographs. Members of the Junior Women's Club invite everyone to come to the Civic Center for a ticket. The first 100 persons to buy a ticket will receive a complimentary gift from Faberge. The cost is $5.00. Proceeds of the Tour will benefit projects of the Club during the coming year. This means that the money raised will return to the community as the Club responds to Hoke County needs.

At the Civic Center, tourgoers will find refreshments and a fine display of men and women demonstrating and selling their crafts. Rosland Farms of Godwin will have a selection of the herbs, spices, and flowers, grown and dried by the Tippett family. The aromas and flowers they preserve will make fine gifts and enhance Christmas around Raeford.

A substitution in the plans for crafters has opened a spot for Merry Ann Harrison, a potter from Fayetteville. She is the owner of Pandamonium Pottery and she recently had a beautiful booth at the Holly Day Fair. She sells functional dishwasher and microwave-safe ware. She creates handbuilt and wheel-thrown pottery.
