4-H hold 'Lock-In'

By Kimberly Potter
The Hillcrest 4-H Club had its annual Lock-In on Friday, March 1.

The evening began with several games and music.

Later, the food committee, with the help of our leader, Mrs. Janet Hendrix, prepared a delicious meal.

Many films were shown on subjects such as: Food-Nutrition, The Wild West, and Fat Albert and the Cooch Kids.

Some members shared information about their project work.

Tripp Plummer told about tools that are used on farms.

Leslie Ashburn gave a presentation on her award winning project.

Priscilla Carson told about participation in the Fashion Revue.

The Lock-In was a definite success and everyone is looking forward to the next one.

County students attend NCSU event on Saturday

Two Hoke County residents were among black high school students from nine states who have been accepted to attend North Carolina State University this fall. They gathered on the campus last Saturday for NCSU's annual Minority Visitation Day.

Warren V. Dukes and Harry L. Southerland were among about 400 students, parents and friends who attended the event, sponsored annually by the NCSU Admissions Office as part of its effort to attract and encourage minority students to enroll at N.C. State.

This year's event, coordinated by Sotello Long, assistant admissions director, includes talks on admission and financial aid procedures. Monet Newkirk, a sophomore who serves as a peer mentor in an NCSU program designed to offer support to incoming minority students, will speak on that program.

Most events will take place in Stewart Theatre. These also include a welcome talk by Dr. Thomas H. Stafford Jr., interim vice chancellor for student affairs, an appearance by Sanya Parson, Miss Pan African 1984, and performances by two student groups, DanceVisions and the New Horizons Choir.

The day will conclude with visits by the students to the schools and departments in which they might enroll.

Where you place birdseed for wild birds can be just as important as what you place in the feeder. Cardinals, for instance, seem to prefer a tabletop on which to eat sunflower seeds in the shell, while mourning doves fancy eating sunflower seeds off the ground.
