Burgess named FMA headmaster

A Raeford man has been chosen to take over the position of Headmaster of Flora Macdonald Academy.

Jack E. Burgess, currently an Assistant Principal at J.W. Turlington Elementary School, will take over operations for Eugene L. McKethan, according to a letter from the Flora Macdonald Board of Trustees.

Burgess will begin at the school on June 16.

"(The Board of Trustees) hired me to administer the instructional program. I see that as the number one priority," Burgess said last week.

"Right off the bat, I don't plan to change anything," said Burgess, but the new headmaster does have some plans for the school.

"I want to work on starting some scholarships and getting some endowments for the school," said Burgess.

Burgess will also be working to get alumni involved with the school "just to get a link to the past," he said.

According to Burgess, one of the reasons the school is so strong and graduates such prepared students is because of the good teacher-parent relationship.

"I will be working to build on that also," he said.

Although there will be no changes in the school for the first semester of Burgess' tenure, he will be working to establish some new course offerings later, he said.

"It will be on a small scale, but students need to be prepared for college and the workforce," he said.

Burgess has held various teaching, coaching and administrative positions in his 13 years in education.

He is a certified school administrator and received his master's and educational specialist degrees from East Carolina University.
