The figures vary from year to year, but during a typical spring and summer, 2 to 12 North Carolinians die of Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever. In 1983, 209 cases were reported and seven people died. The North Carolina Medical Society says deaths can be avoided if victims receive medical attention in time.

Marshals named

Marshals for the 1985 graduation have been announced by Dr. Lenwood Simpson, principal of Hoke County High School. These students earned this honor by being members of the present junior class and by having the highest grade point average on all college preparatory courses taken in high

Science and Math Sch. invites local student

The North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics has invited 199 high school sophomores from 71 counties to enroll this fall in the class of 1987.

Carla Oxendine has been invited from Hoke County. She attends Hoke High School.

The N.C. School of Science and Mathematics (NCSSM) is the nation's first public, residential high school for academically talented students with an interest in science and mathematics and the potential for high achievement in those areas.

The admissions process at the two-year school is competitive, with more than four applicants in 1985 for each student invited to join this fall's junior class.

Charles R. Eilber, director of the school, said that he was pleased with the quality of this year's applicants.

"It was very difficult to choose among these exceptional candidates," Eilber said. "Most of the applicants have had excellent preparation in their home town schools for the challenges we offer at NCSSM."

Students applying to NCSSM submit grade reports, scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test and California Achievement Test, indicators of potential and teacher references. They also participate in admissions and placement testing as well as interviews.

According to Ola F. Stringer, NCSSM head of admissions, all applicants are rated by a broadly based selection committee, which includes leaders of North Carolina's scientific and educational communities as well as members of the school's faculty and staff.

Summer intern

Rose Marie Parish has recently come to work at the Raeford Burlington Industries Plant in the Weave Mill as a Summer Management Intern. She is a student at UNC-Chapel Hill and plans to graduate next year. Rose is a native of Hoke County and a graduate of Hoke County High School.
