

House of Raeford named one of the state's top firms

One company from the Raeford area has been named to the North Carolina 100 by Arthur Andersen & Co. and Business: North Carolina magazine.

The rankings, based on annual sales volume from figures supplied or verified by the participating companies, list the top 100 privately-held companies in the state. The rankings were compiled after a three-month study by Arthur Andersen & Co. and the magazine.

In the Raeford area, the company named to the North Carolina

100 was House of Raeford Farms, which ranked 15th.

Manufacturing, which represents more than half of the companies on the list, dominated the North Carolina 100 as it did last year. The study included only privately-held companies.

Firms whose stock is traded on any public market were excluded.

So were companies not headquartered in North Carolina, and those that are subsidiaries of the out-of-state companies.

Banks and other financial institutions, real estate companies and retailers were not included.

The chief executive officers of the North Carolina 100 were honored on June 5 at a luncheon in Charlotte. The featured speaker will be nationally syndicated newspaper columnist and television commentator George Will.

Arthur Andersen & Co., the international accounting and consulting firm, provides accounting and audit, tax management information consulting, and professional education services to its clients through 176 offices in 45 countries.

North Carolina offices are in Charlotte, Greensboro and Raleigh.
