

Two injured
The drivers of both cars, in this wreck that happened last Thursday afternoon, were injured and taken to the offices of Dr. Riley Jordan for treatment. According to a report by State Trooper A.J. Beason, a 1978 Oldsmobile (foreground), driven by Joan Bratcher, 25, was hit in the rear by a 1978

Toyota (left) driven by 20-year-old Kathy Lynn Lee. Over $2,000 damage was done to both cars, reports say. There were no charges brought against either driver. Bratcher was attempting to make a right turn off U.S. 401 Business when the accident occurred, the report says.

Hoke High ROTC unit takes part in exercise

Eighty-five cadets from Hoke High School, under the supervision of Major C. McGuire and SGM. Williams, were on their annual Spring Field Training Exercise at Fort Bragg from May 14 to May 18.

The main purpose of the Field Training Exercise was to take the theory taught in class and put it to practical application in the field. A better understanding of the Army was also an objective of this training.

All the support for the cadets while they were in the field was provided by the Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 82nd Airborne Combat Aviation Battalion. Paratroopers from this battalion trained the cadets in first aid, survival and map reading.

Airborne pathfinders from this battalion trained the Hoke High

JROTC RANGER Team in basic patrolling, camouflage and night land navigation.

The Combat Aviation Battalion also provided the cadets with tents, a complete field mess hall, and static displays to include Stinger and TOW missiles, and a Vulcan Antiaircraft gun.

A flight demonstration by the AH-1 Cobra Attack Helicopter was also provided.

While in the field, the cadets functioned as an Infantry Battalion, utilizing the cadet chain-of-command. The cadet battalion commander, Cadet Lieutenant Colonel Mark Black, was the commander of all cadets.

Cadet Captains William Carter and Garret Edens commanded Alpha and Bravo companies, respectively.

Carolina Power & Light seeking hike

Carolina Power & Light Co. has filed with the North Carolina Utilities Commission a request to increase the fuel component in rates charged to North Carolina retail electric customers.

For the average residential customer using 1,000 kilowatt-hours a month, the new fuel component would mean an increase of about six percent, or $4.20 a month. The increase, if approved, would probably not become effective until the fall.

"Customers are paying less than the actual cost of fuel under CP&L's current electric rates," said Norris L. Edge, CP&L's vice president for rates and service practices. "By September when new rates are expected to go into effect, the company estimates it will have spent about $35.5 million more for fuel to produce electricity

Howell's Mutual Drugs

Shocking confession for ladies!
Unwanted hair can be removed by a number of OTC depilatory products. When used according to directions, they are safe and effective.

Men who experience shaving irritations may wish to give depilatories a try, while women who, for one reason or another, may not wish to use such an approach, should be reminded that they can find relief from unwanted hair by shaving.

Don't be shocked, ladies! Remember, it's kosher to shave legs. Why not your face? Hair does not grow any faster when shaved.

COMPARE OUR PRICES ANYWHERE! NO PURCHASE NECESSARY FOR A SMILE!
