Hoke women attend conference

Four Hoke County women have been selected for the N.C. Agricultural Extension's first leadership development program for rural minority women.

Attending their first Raleigh seminar July 25-26 were: Della Maynor, Rt. 1, Shannon; Bernice B. McPhatter, 2606 Phillippi Church Road, Raeford; Carol Rose Page, Rt. 1 Lumber Bridge; and Shirley Daniels Rush, Raeford.

The program will help black and Indian women, aged 20 to 40, to develop their leadership skills. These women will participate in learning experiences and seminars over the course of three years, according to Brenda Foster Allen, program director.

"Topics in the first two-day seminar included leadership and women in rural communities, developing friendships, leadership styles and personality types, changing problems into strengths and making decisions," said Dr. Allen.

"My people are in need of leaders," said Ms. Maynor, a Lumbee Indian. She plans to pass on the information and skills she acquires in local workshops. Ms. Maynor is involved with the Girl Scouts of America and is secretary of the Hoke County Youth Task Force and an advisor to the Young Volunteers in Action. She is also a board member of the N.C. Commission of Indian Affairs. She is active in her church, on the board of Indian Education Act Program and belongs to the N.C. Association of Register of Deeds, the Hoke County Foster Care Review Committee and the Hoke County Council on the Status of Women.

"Several years ago, I was involved with a family planning advisory council, and it did not go as well as I would have liked it to have gone. I believe that with proper leadership skills at that time I could have done things with the group and we could have made some of the changes we started out to do," said Mrs. McPhatter. "I would like to try to start our family planning council again." She is presently a member of the Council on the Status of Women.

Mrs. Rush and Mrs. McPhatter both hold B.S. degrees in business administration and are accounting clerks. "I would like to know more about programs that can benefit my children and others in the community," said Mrs. Rush, who is involved in church work.

"I feel it will gear me in the right direction to become a more effective leader in the community and it will aid in my future plans to one day become a publically elected official," Ms. Page said. She plans to share the skills she learns in workshops, group discussions and organizations. Ms. Page has a B.A. degree in intermediate education and is a teacher. She is also second vice president of the Democratic Party in Hoke County, a 4-H leader, past Heart Fund Association secretary, teenage pageant talent and creative speaking chairman, member of the board of directors of the General Productions Corporation, a Sunday School teacher and youth department assistant director, usher board president, junior choir director and church announcer.

The new extension program is funded by grants from the Z. Smith Reynolds and R.J. Reynolds foundations.
