

The way it was

With the remodeling of the Hoke County Courthouse about to get underway, it might be good for county officials to study old photographs of the building for future plans. Here the Edinborough Avenue side of the building is surrounded with trees in this circa 1935 summer photo. (Note the water tank trunk was removed soon after it was painted). Hoke attorney Hiram Kirkpatrick (left) chats with another man in front of a vacant lot which eventually became the old Coopers Food Store.

Kirkpatrick was known, not only for his legal prowess, but also the goats he kept in his office above the McLauchlin Company. Anyone having information about the identity of the other man or anyone with other old Hoke County Photographs should contact Sam Morris at The News-Journal. The newspaper is looking for information in preparation for a special edition for the 75th Birthday of the county. This photo was furnished by Mike McNeill.

Hefner backs textile bill

Congressman Bill Hefner voted, along with 262 of his colleagues, to pass the Textile and Apparel Trade Enforcement Act.

"This is the most important piece of legislation I have worked on in the ten years I have been in Congress," Hefner said after the vote.

The bill was originally scheduled for a vote on Wednesday, but the House leadership pulled the legislation off the schedule in deference to the prime minister of Singapore, but Congressman Hefner refused to have the vote put off.

He and Congressman Ed Jenkins of Georgia requested an emergency meeting with House Speaker Tip O'Neil where they convinced the Speaker to put the bill back on the floor today instead of next week.

Speaking from the House floor during debate Hefner said, "It's time for action. It's time to stop exporting American jobs. There has been too much silly talk about free trade, as if free trade was some sacred scripture. This legislation will give us competitive trade, and that's all the workers of my district ask for."

"The largest textile plant in my district employs 16,000 people. Over the last two years, this company has lost 3,100 jobs. And these losses were directly related to foreign imports."

"Cabarrus County, North Carolina has the highest concentration of textile mills in my district."

"In May of this year unemployment in Cabarrus County was 18.7%. That is depression level unemployment, and we must do something about it."

"I have received thousands and thousands of letters from textile workers in my district begging for help from outrageous surge of imports that the Reagan administration has allowed to occur over the last four years."

"Over 2,000 people attended a Trade Subcommittee hearing which I arranged for my district back in June. Witness after witness sounded the same concern: 'Will I have a job tomorrow.'

"Textiles in North Carolina's largest industry, supplying 3 out of 10 manufacturing jobs in the state, with 1,288 plants in 81 of our 100 counties," Hefner said.

The purpose of the Textile and Apparel Trade Enforcement Act is to provide for an orderly and non-disruptive growth of imports in all fiber, textile and apparel products.
