

Planting trees

Hoke High Future Farmers of America club members and horticulture students plant dogwoods and crape myrtles Saturday on the medians of North Main Street in Raeford. The trees were provided by the Raeford Junior Woman's Club and planted by the students with a little help from instructor and landscaper Dan McGougan. The students also completed landscaping around the Raeford depot building Saturday with plants donated by the Raeford Woman's Club.

One of the world's most nutritious root crops is perhaps this country's best kept secret. Groundnuts, about the size of golf balls, are as tasty as potatoes and have four times the protein. They were not always unwanted and forgotten, however. The Pilgrims may not have survived their first winter without these nutritious nuts. And now, after some 300 years, scientists are trying to make this wild vine vegetable a household word, that may one day compete with potatoes.

Hoke migrant parents take part in workshop

Hoke County parents took part in the migrant education state parent advisory council workshop, which was held on Tuesday, November 12 at the Ramada Inn in Apex.

The theme of this meeting was how parents can motivate their children and instill in them a positive self-concept.

The keynote speaker was Dr. Harold W. Webb, former Director of State Personnel. He challenged parents to develop their most precious resources - their children.

Dr. Oliver Johnson, consultant, Division of Support Programs, N.C. Department of Public Instruction, explained and demonstrated many excellent motivation techniques parents can use with their children.

"Developing A Positive Self Concept" was the topic of Wendell Hall's message to the group of approximately 175 parents in attendance.

Hall is a consultant with the Division of Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention Program, Department of Public Instruction.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ware and Mrs. Linda Locklear, who are parents of children at Scurlock School and West Hoke Elementary School, attended the workshop along with Alona McNeill, interium recruiter/clerk for the Migrant Education program in Hoke County.

The Migrant Education program in Hoke County serves students in grades K-12.

The program provides tutorial services in mathematics for students who are eligible for the program.

West Hoke PTA draws a crowd

The first item of business was plans for a membership drive which will extend through November.

All West Hoke parents are encouraged to join and support their PTA.

Raeford student performs at ECU

A Raeford student was among advanced voice students in the East Carolina University School of Music who were soloists in the recent ECU Opera Theatre program, "An evening of Opera Scenes."

The performance, presented on campus Nov. 1, featured key scenes from three operas: Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro," and Verdi's "Falstaff" and "Il Trovatore."

Michelle Crotty, a junior from Raeford, sang the roles of Marcellina and Countess Almaviva in "Figaro."

Since its founding in 1966, the ECU Opera Theatre has performed a number of well-known operas such as "The Magic Flute," "Falstaff" and "Die Fledermaus" as well as first North Carolina performances of seldom heard works.

The group also presents regular evenings of scenes from selected operas.

In a recent Gallup Poll, 61 percent of Americans surveyed said top priority should be given to protecting the environment - even at the risk of curbing economic growth.
