The Value of Social Life

"I have always rather condemned society people as being useless," said the Lace Buyer. "But I am beginning to think I may be wrong."

"No, you are right," replied her assistant, bitterly. "What earthly good are they? They simply pass their lives in frivolity, and never earn a cent of the money they so recklessly spend. What good are such people?"

"I went to Mrs. Van Orden's tea, yesterday," said the Lace Buyer, reflectively. "She was good enough to invite me, and I just made up my mind to go. I thought I would like to see, for once, that phase of life."

"Didn't you feel lonesome?"

"No, Mrs. Van Orden was lovely and introduced me to a lot of the people. And it was this graciousness, and the atmosphere of charm about the whole thing, that set me to thinking that social life has a value and fills a need."

"Suppose," went on the Lace Buyer, "that this sort of thing were dropped out of life entirely? I tell you it would be a distinct loss. Some may carry it to an extreme, it is true. And some may get nothing from it, but the show and glitter. But the thought at the heart of it is sweet and beautiful. And life needs it. We workers haven't the time to give it. And if it weren't for the so-called society people, it would have to die out. So I say, they are useful and fulfill a purpose."

"If we had more time," said her assistant, "we could do it."

"Yes. But as conditions are, we haven't the time. No doubt, conditions will improve until we, too, can bring into our lives social graces and their softening, refining effect. But until we can, they need, for the good of humanity, to be kept alive. And this, the society world is doing, not perhaps in the truest, finest way; but as best it can with its present limited outlook on life. When we all have a broader view of life, we will see these little social affairs for what they are—not things for personal aggrandisement or the further of ambitions, but opportunities for the kindness and graciousness in our natures to blossom out, the places where we plant flowers along life's highway."

"Well—maybe," said her assistant. "I know I would like to do a little flower planting myself."

"Since you can't," responded the Lace Buyer; "be glad there are those who can, and that life is thus made more enjoyable and beautiful."

Woman's Nature

It is the nature of women to suffer uncomplainingly, to discomforts and fears that accompany the bearing of children. Motherhood is their crowning glory, and they brave its sufferings for the joy that children bring. No expectant mother need suffer, however, during the period of waiting, nor feel that she is in danger when baby comes, if Mother's Friend is used in preparation of the event. Mother's Friend relieves the pain and discomfort caused by the strain on the different ligaments, overcomes nausea by counteraction, and prevents backache. Its regular use fits and prepares every portion of the mother's system for a proper and natural ending of the term, and it assures for her a quick and complete recovery. Mother's Friend is sold at drug stores. Write for free book for expectant mothers.

MR. CLOUGH IN TOWN.

Providence Trainer Will Go into the Hotel Business.

Dr. Leslie Clough, of Texas, who was in the city with the Providence baseball team as trainer has returned to the city and will enter the hotel business. He has purchased a half interest in the Corcoran hotel and will make Durham his home at least for some time to come.

Dr. Clough left the Providence aggregation at Newport News, deciding to return to the Bull City. Owing to the excellent condition of the Providence men the assistance of the train or was not necessary. He left the team with the understanding that he would come back if his services were needed.

Friends of the doctor will find him at the Corcoran where he will be glad to shake their hands. Beginning the first of the coming week Dr. Clough will be half interested in the Corcoran hostelry.

TRINITY VS. GUILFORD.

Will Meet Strong Quaker Team in High Point Today.

The Trinity baseball team is to leave the city this morning for High Point, where this afternoon they will meet the strong Guilford College team in the first of a two-series contest. Guilford has one of the best college teams in the state, due largely to the pitching of Shore, who is perhaps the best college twirler in the state this season. He will likely do the mound work for the Quakers in the game this afternoon, and will have his hands full in handling the Trinity aggregation.

Local fans have high hopes of Trinity's success today. The Methodists have an unusually strong infield, and Guilford sluggers will not find it so easy to get past them as has been the case in some of the games they have played. News from the game will be awaited with interest.

HELD OPEN CAUCUS.

House Republicans Invite Newspaper Correspondents.

Washington, April 11.—With less than half the republicans of the house present at the caucus tonight it was decided to open the doors and admit the press. Whether future caucuses will be conducted in the same manner is to be determined as the situation arises. Minority Leader Mann offered the resolution to open the doors. It was discussed for more than an hour and met with much opposition.

PLAINTIFF LOST.

Defendant Could Not Be Held for Recovery.

The opinion of Squire R. A. Cox, in the case where H. J. Bailey was suing R. J. Aiken for a portion of a month's salary, was that Bailey could not recover. The decision was accepted as a final one for notice of an appeal was not made.

It appears that Mr. Bailey was employed by the month and according to the contract he was subject to a discharge at any time, the contract not specifying how long his services would be kept. The plaintiff was of the opinion that he could command his full month's time even though a part of the month was taken up by the Christmas holidays and no services were rendered by him. Squire Cox was of the opinion that Mr. Bailey could not recover and made this plain.
