war, died at his home late today of angina pectoris.

Mr. Page's death in Aberdeen, where he had spent most of his mature life, interests Raleigh immensely because the capital saw more of him than any other locality saw and because what he did as a citizen of the Sandhills was wrought into the life of the state by legislative enactment.

When Automobiles Strike Head-on

The modern death-trap is likely to be a straight stretch with three lanes of traffic—like the notorious Astor Flats on the Albany Post Road, in New York, where there have been as many as 27 fatalities in one summer month, says F. C. Furnas, writing in the August issue of Reader's Digest. With the idea of shocking the motorist into a realization of the consequences of careless driving Mr. Furnas then proceeds to give the following gruesome account of a smash-up on this stretch of highway.

This sudden vision of broad, straight road tempts many an ordinarily sensible driver into passing the man ahead. Simultaneously a driver coming the other way swings out at high speed. At the last moment each tries to get into line again, but the gaps are closed. As the cars in line are forced into the ditch to capsize or crash fences, the passers meet, almost head on, in a swirling, grinding smash that sends them caroming obliquely into the others.

THOUSANDS DIE AS SCIENCE FAILS

Does the insect spray you use have full killing strength? Science alone cannot tell. That is why every batch of Sinclair P.D. manufactured is tested on live insects. Thousands of insects die in these tests every year to assure you an insecticide that is certain death to flies, moths, mosquitoes and other household pests. Get P.D. at your drug, hardware, grocery or department store.
