HANCOCK CHARGES BAILEY IN CONTROL

Says WPA Office Being Used to Build Up Bailey Machine

Washington, Aug. 13.—Resentment in the North Carolina House delegation against the way patronage is being handled by the works progress administration in North Carolina, flared again here today when Representative Frank Hancock issued a statement in which he charged by inference that George W. Coan, Jr., State WPA director, was running his office to build up a political machine for Senator Josiah W. Bailey.

"It is quite apparent," Hancock said, "that the majority of key appointments in the WPA offices in our state are being made upon the expressed recommendations or with the tacit approval of Senator Bailey."

The Fifth North Carolina district representative expressed the opinion that the WPA in North Carolina was a "one-man set up," but added that under our political system "no one can justly blame a man for using every legitimate means of promoting his own political welfare."

Coan comes from Winston-Salem, which is in Hancock's district. Hancock was not consulted regarding the appointment until it was ready to go through. Senator Bailey, Representative Doughton and S. Clay Williams having engineered it, Hancock then joined in the recommendation, which was essential before Doughton would give his final consent.

Shortly after Coan was appointed, House members began to complain about the lack of consideration in the WPA setup in the state and off and on they have privately expressed resentment over lack of consideration in patronage matters.

Hancock's statement today, however, is the first time a member of the House delegation has publicly linked Senator Bailey with the WPA organization and gone so far as to say a Bailey political machine was in the making.

TO TAKE POSITION WITH WINSTON BANK

LeRoy Martin Resigns From State School Commission

LeRoy Martin, executive secretary of the state school commission, Thursday night announced his resignation, effective early in September.

Mr. Martin, who is well known locally, in a statement issued at Raleigh, said he had accepted a position in the trust department of the Wachovia Bank and Trust Company of Winston-Salem.

The resignation ends a connection of nine years as executive secretary to the school commission and its predecessor, the State Board of Equalization. He was named to the position when the State Board of Equalization was organized in April of 1927.

In his resignation, Mr. Martin voiced praise for North Carolina's progress along educational lines. During the nine-year period of his connection with state school affairs, he said the state public school fund has grown from $3,250,000 in 1927 to the $20,031,000 to be expended this year.

"I am grateful," the statement said, "for the opportunity which I have had to serve the state in helping lay the foundation for what I earnestly believe to be the greatest program of public education ever undertaken by a governmental unit."

VITAMINS NEEDED IN POULTRY FEED

Are Essential to Health and Development of Birds

Although no one knows exactly what vitamins are, scientists no longer doubt that they are essential to the health and development of animals and birds.

One of the important factors in managing poultry flocks is providing the birds with an adequate supply of vitamins A, B, D, E, and G, says Roy S. Dearstyne, head of the State College poultry department.

Practical sources of vitamin A are: yellow corn, sprouted oats, milk and its by-products, cod liver and certain other fish oils, egg yolk, alfalfa, green and cured carrots, cabbage, green grasses and legumes and their hays, and vacuum-dried white fish meal.

Vitamin B is found in practically all cereal grains and their by-products, milk and its by-products, in green grasses and legumes and their hays, in certain tubers, and in yeast.

Sources of Vitamin D include: milk and its by-products, potent fish oils, green grasses and legumes and their hays, irradiated feed stuffs, and the action of the ultra-violet rays of the sun.

Vitamin E is abundant in green feeds and cereal grains. Vitamin G is abundant in pork liver feed, dried whey, milk and its by-products, fish meal, meat scraps, soybean oil meal, green grasses and legumes and their hays, and in yeast.

Birds given a well-balanced feed and an opportunity to get out on a green range usually secure enough vitamins to meet their needs, Dearstyne stated.

Vitamin deficiencies often occur when birds are kept closely confined and are given a diet overbalanced with scratch and mash feeds, he added.
