BETTER HEALTH

PNEUMONIA

A fever ushered in by a chill. A pain in the chest or side, or sometimes in the abdomen. A cough which brings up a rusty colored sputum. The pulse is rapid, the breathing rapid, too, and difficult, so that even the little muscles on each side of the nose may be brought into play. Here we have the typical picture of pneumonia, that most fatal disease of winter and early spring. It is estimated that there are from 350,000 to 375,000 cases in this country every year. Thousands are carried off in the prime of life.

When I was a medical student I was taught that I could do little more than to secure for my patient, good nursing, and that was nursing which would save the patient's strength so that he might sur-band all his heart's resources for its critical struggle.

But now there is a serum available against pneumonia caused by pneumococci, types 1, 2, 5, 7, 14, and 18. This makes about 85 per cent of all cases of pneumonia. But if the patient is to get the advantage of this life-saving serum it must be given early and the serum must be selected according to the type of pneumococcus with which he is infected. A committee of the New York Academy of Medicine recommends that free laboratory tests should everywhere be made available, that free serum should be available to physicians that request it, that adequate funds should be granted to the department of health for pneumonia control work and for research.

The carrying out of these recommendations in your community in the near future may be a matter of life and death to you or to someone whom you love.

There were only 23,000 automobiles in the United States in 1902; today there are more than one thousand times that number.

A MESSAGE TO MOTORISTS ABOUT THE NEW GASOLINE LAW

The State of North Carolina, under a new law which became effective December 1st, prescribes certain minimum quality standards for gasoline.

These quality requirements were set in view of the needs of today's motors. Yet several years ago, That Good Gulf Gasoline was stepped up well above these new state standards—and has continued so ever since.

Gulf's premium gasoline, No-Nox Ethyl, exceeds the new state minimum requirements by the widest margin in motoring history.

It has been Gulf's practice in the past—and will continue to be so in the future—to set its own standards of quality, and to raise those standards as rapidly as advances in technology permit.

To this end, Gulf maintains nine modern laboratories, staffed by able scientists, whose aim is constantly to better every previous best. This is why the Sign of the Orange Disc, displayed by all Good Gulf dealers of North Carolina, is a reliable guide to fine motoring products.
