Kiwanians to Sponsor Wrestling Matches

The main match will pit Ali Ghandi, "the praying Turk," against Pete Managoff. Ghandi is said to be one of the most colorful wrestlers in the world. One of the first things he does upon entering the ring is to beseech Allah for aid. He wears a turban with his street clothes and has not been in the United States long enough to get rid of his dialect. He is a great hand with the Indian death lock, and also sometimes ties his opponents' necks up in the ropes. Thirty years of age weighing 206, he is unusually fast for a big man.

Managoff weighs 215 and has a baffling wrestling change of pace. The Japanese short arm scissors, the flying tackle, airplane spin, front headlocks and crab holds are some of the holds he uses. He is 28 years of age and has been wrestling eight years.

The Kiwanis club committee looking after all details of the match, have announced that plenty of seats, including reserved and general admission, will be available, the ring to be located in the center of the gym. Plenty of action is assured, and both ladies and gentlemen are urged to turn out.

Jonesville Boy Admits Serious Robbery Charge

railway station at Roaring River was entered and robbed of some undelivered packages of cigarettes and candy. Detective Caldwell, of Winston-Salem, was called into the investigation. The disappearance of the Hager youth at the time led to suspicion of his connection with the case. Two school buildings in the vicinity of Roaring River had also been entered and burglarized of small wares.

Tuesday evening, following the Roaring River robbery, the home of C. C. Adams, in East Jonesville, was entered through a window. A purse containing three dollars, and two pocket knives, were taken from Adams' pockets.

It was also said that the youth took a quilt from the bed in which Mr. and Mrs. Adams were sleeping to protect himself from cold in a barn where he spent the remainder of the night.

Hager was arrested by Chief Madison Friday night and placed in the Elkin jail, where he was said to have confessed guilt in all cases. He said he employed Noah Pardue to drive him to Roaring River at a cost of $5.00, and that when he gave him a $20.00 bill, Pardue borrowed the remaining $15.00, which had not been repaid.

Pardue was arrested at his place of employment Friday. He denied Hager's story.

Before the case was aired Friday before Magistrate Hinson, Hager accompanied Policeman Madison and Policeman J. L. Darnell of Elkin, to a hill top in Jonesville to unearth the hidden stolen treasure. The money stolen last Thursday night was buried in one hole in the earth; the knives, identified by the owner, in another; the cigarettes taken from Roaring River were hidden in a mound of leaves.
