Dr. Sykes Reports Two Epidemics In Surry County During Year 1938

In submitting a comprehensive report of the work of the Surry county health department for the year 1938, Dr. R. J. Sykes, head of the county health department, reports only two epidemics during the year which included 942 reported cases of measles and 254 of whooping cough. No deaths resulted from measles and only two from whooping cough.

Sixteen cases of diphtheria resulted in only one death. These could have been prevented, Dr. Sykes said, by the immunization of these children at the age of six months. Forty-three mild cases of scarlet fever were reported.

Not a single case of typhoid fever originated in Surry county during the year, a record never before equalled, and due perhaps to the regular anti-typhoid clinics each week and to improved sanitary conditions in general.

Not a case of smallpox has been reported since 1932.

Regarding acute contagions only two cases of epidemic meningitis, resulting in one death, and two cases of infantile paralysis with no deaths were reported.

The venereal disease program, one in which Dr. Sykes has waged a constant fight, brought the best results of any year since it was launched. Final records of 1938 show 114 new admissions to medical service, 9,338 clinic visits, 7,593 syphilitic treatments. Night clinics established in September for those unable to attend day clinics brought gratifying response.

Aid received during the year from federal and state governments for venereal disease control has given this department a clinician, drugs, supplies and equipment which were needed.

Considerable progress was made in the tuberculosis program and plans have been completed for two yearly adult clinics, in February and July, respectively. Five hundred forty-one patients attended the 1938 clinics and 529 received X-rays or were fluoroscoped. Twenty-three were admitted from Surry to the state sanatorium.

A total of 1,366 persons were vaccinated against smallpox; 2,865 were given anti-typhoid inoculation; 793 young children were immunized against diphtheria.

Three pre-natal clinics were conducted in the county, particularly for expectant mothers not financially able to have proper medical care. Three hundred eighty-two visits were made to these clinics and 703 field visits to ante partum cases.

A birth control program started late in the year on a small scale resulted in eleven admissions to this service.

The absence of the health officer for the pursuing of post-graduate work and the illness of the acting health officer, interfered seriously with the pre-school hygiene program, hence there were only 484 visits to medical conferences.

In this school hygiene service, 14,731 children were inspected by nurses and 478 examined by the physician. The lack of a dental program is a hindrance to the work in the schools, Dr. Sykes stated.

Six hundred thirty examinations were given to milk handlers,
