

SOCIETY.

Mission Circle to Meet This Evening
 Circle number four of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist church will meet this evening (Thursday) at 7:45 at the home of Mrs. Max Boyles on Gwyn avenue, with Mrs. J. Coke Marion associate hostess.
 All members are cordially invited to attend.

Miss Beddingfield Honors Visitor at Party Monday
 Honoring her guest, Miss Margaret Robertson, of Mt. Airy, Miss Elizabeth Beddingfield entertained at a scavenger hunt Monday evening at her home on West Main street. The guest list included eight members of the younger set. Following the hunt, which led over a wide area, the guests returned to the Beddingfield home where they were served a tempting collation.

Mrs. Freeman Is Club Hostess Thursday
 Mrs. R. C. Freeman delightfully entertained members of her bridge club and a few additional friends at a bridge-luncheon at her home on Church street Thursday morning. Bridge was played at two tables. At the final count of scores the club award for high score went to Mrs. Errol Hayes and the visitor's prize to Mrs. Lathan Mills.
 A beautifully appointed luncheon was served at one o'clock.

Mrs. Darnell Is Hostess To Y. W. A. Monday
 Mrs. Arthur Darnell entertained members of the Y. W. A. of the Elkin Valley Baptist church at her home Monday evening, with sixteen members present.

The devotional was in charge of Miss Bertice Bates. An interesting program, "Plowshares and Swords," was presented by Misses Alice McCain, Helen Hayes and Grace Lawrence.
 The hostess served delicious refreshments during a pleasant social hour.
 The August meeting will be held at the home of Misses Milledred and Grace Lawrence.

Circles of Methodist W. M. S. Meet Monday
 Circles of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist church met Monday afternoon at 3:30 in the following homes:

Circle number one met with Mrs. J. G. Abernethy, on West Main street. Mrs. W. W. Whitaker conducted the devotionals and Mesdames J. G. Abernethy, Mason Lillard and W. A. Finney taught the Bible study.

Circle number two met with Mrs. Errol Hayes, on Church street. Mrs. R. C. Freeman conducted the devotionals and Mrs. R. G. Smith led the Bible study.
 Circle number three met with Mrs. J. S. Atkinson, on West Main street, with ten members present. Mrs. J. L. Hall led the devotionals and Mrs. H. C. Salmon taught the Bible lesson.

A social hour was enjoyed at the close of the programs. Each hostess served refreshments.

Baptist Circles Meet Monday in Monthly Session

The circles of the Woman's Missionary Union of the First Baptist church met Monday in the following homes:

The Emma Leechman circle met with Mrs. R. P. Crater on Gwyn avenue with twelve members present. Mrs. I. S. Gambill conducted the devotionals and Mrs. F. M. Norman led the mission study.

The Pearl Johnson circle met at the home of Miss Mattie Mae Powell on Bridge street with Mrs. Hugh Brannon associate hostess, with 14 members present. Mrs. Sam Ray conducted the devotional and Mrs. Freer Adams was in charge of the program.

The Rosalee Appleby circle met with Mrs. Phillip Greenwood on Bridge street with six members present. Mrs. R. L. Reinhardt conducted the devotionals and Miss Lee Mae Lowery led the program.

Each hostess served refreshments during a pleasant social half-hour at the conclusion of the programs.

OFFERS HOTEL RESERVATION

Woodyard Associates, Inc., Will Arrange for Low Priced Rooms in N. Y.

FOR TRIBUNE READERS

Woodyard Associates, Inc., 247 Park Avenue, New York, N. Y., has advised The Tribune that anyone desiring reasonably priced hotel accommodations during their visit to the New York World's Fair may obtain them by simply telephoning Plaza 8-0020 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. (or Chelsea 2-4780 after 5 p.m. and on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays) and giving their name as a subscriber to this paper.

This service is offered solely as a convenience to out-of-towners planning a visit to the Fair, who do not wish to pay the extremely high prices of the larger hotels. There is no charge for this service.

For the most part, accommodations can be had for $1.50 per day per person. However, if more spacious accommodations are desired, they can be had at slightly higher rates. Children under 12 are provided for at half rates.

If anyone wishes to make reservations in advance, simply write Woodyard Associates, giving the price you wish to pay, as well as the date, duration of your planned visit, and the number of persons to be accommodated. Reservations made in this way carry no obligation, but should not be made until plans are definite.

These apartment hotels are located on or near the Hudson River, in excellent residential sections within easy driving or subway distance from the Fair grounds.

TO HOLD BIRTHDAY DINNER ON JULY 9th

Friends and relatives of Rev. Bradley Mathis are invited to attend a birthday dinner to be given in his honor Sunday, July 9, celebrating his 87th anniversary. The dinner will be given at the home of his son, Sam Mathis, at Caudle Springs, near Swan Creek.
 Rev. J. P. Davis, pastor of the Jonesville Baptist church, will address the gathering. Other ministers are especially invited to attend. Dinner will be served at one o'clock.

WAKE UP AND LIVE

By DOROTHEA BRANDE

In everyday life, we tend to think of the imagination as something which may, perhaps, be spoken of as "useful" to artists of all sorts, but as being almost the opposite of useful in the lives of practical men and women.

To use one's imagination, generally, is thought of as taking a holiday, as allowing the wits to go wool-gathering, the mind to relax and sun itself. After indulging it—for we commonly think of the exercise of the imagination as being in some way an indulgence.

As a consequence we look warily at the imagination, often seeking to check it, or, in some extreme cases, even to eradicate it. That it can be of immense benefit in the most prosaic affairs is an idea at which many readers will balk.

But that is because they do think of the imagination as a faculty which always wanders unchecked, which must be permitted to make its own rules and occasions, which is incapable of being directed.

Instead of betraying us into reverie and resignation to unsatisfactory conditions—instead, even, of being employed merely as a means of recreation—imagination can contribute to the making of a good life.

Working as far as possible under orders from the will, and hand-in-hand with reason, it can explore new fields for our efforts, can bring back to us some of our original freshness towards our work which we have lost by fatigue and routine; it can even perform such a severely practical function for us as to discover new markets for our wares, or new ways in which to use old talents.

First of all, we can use imagination to see ourselves and our work in some perspective.

Everyone knows how a child identifies himself utterly with all he owns and does, with all those who care for him. He is outraged if asked to share his possessions, the breaking of a beloved toy is a tragedy, if it rains on the day when a picnic was planned one would think the sun could never shine for him again. If a mother or nurse leaves him while he is awake, he has been most treacherously betrayed.

In fact, much early education has as its one goal the teaching of the little egoist to see himself in somewhat truer relation to his world. More or less successfully, each of us has had to learn this lesson; but it is almost never fully understood.

To our last days there is still a trace of that childish egotism in us—sometimes so very much more than a trace that an adult suffers, resents, sulks, and complains in a way only too reminiscent of the nursery.

The infantile adult can never see himself clearly; even less can he see his work or the object he has made quite as it is, undistorted by the over-estimation of personal pride, or the underestimation of humility and fear.

Consequently he is never in a position to know just where his contribution does go in the scheme of his world, and is at the mercy of the reports of friends or strangers. Even here he is bewildered; however plain the words may be, however just the estimate which is given him, he will not hear exactly what is said because he cannot bring to the moment his undivided and unemotional attention. His intense preoccupation with his own hopes and desires spoils him as a recording instrument.

By looking, in imagination, first at himself, then at the work he wants to do, then at the audience to whom he hopes to appeal; and, finally, by bringing all these elements into relation with each other, he could keep his courage from being undermined, his mind unconfused by conflicting advice, his estimate of his performance just.
