Help Keep FOOD PRICES DOWN

Unnecessary Storing Of Surplus Supplies Tends To Boost Prices!

With a major European war in progress many people in this country, remembering the sharp food price advances during the World War, are inclined to buy large surpluses of food at present prices in anticipation of price rises which they fear will come. This rush for supplies furnishes a great temptation for advance in prices which has been taken advantage of by speculators.

You, as a consumer, should not get excited, and refrain from creating conditions that may seriously affect the economic life of this community, as well as the country as a whole, especially when there is no sound reason for it. America is not at war, nor likely to be anytime soon, if at all. Our resources are all intact and with a bountiful supply of products of every description there can be no sound reason for inflated prices or hoarding of supplies.

Our advice to you is to buy what you need, but no more. Naturally, as a food store, it is to our interest to sell all we can, but in a case like this we feel it is to all our interests to do everything possible to keep prices down.
