EMOTIONALISM VERSUS AMERICA

This is the only country on earth which has ever allowed pure emotionalism to drive it knowingly to the brink of collapse. This happened in the World War and can happen again in this war—though the present temper of the American people would indicate that those whose love for other countries is greater than their love for America, are going to have a job on their hands this time.

However, the propagandist, whether he be foreign-born or home brew, is untiring and original. We don't hear anything about the "War to End Wars" this time, and not a great deal about "Saving Democracy." This time it is "Stop Hitler"; "Save the World from Aggression"; and more recently a newer slogan which goes about like this: "We can't let our Real Friends be defeated."

Of the four nations involved in Europe today, not one, for purely friendly reasons, has ever officially come to the aid of this country in time of need.

Upon four outstanding occasions, citizens of each of these has helped us privately, and the French Government officially, under Louis Sixteenth, sent a strong force of men to win our freedom from England. But this French force was sent for the sole purpose of weakening England—with whom France was at war—and of saving France's remaining possessions in America.

Poland's Kosciusko and Pulaski, and particularly the Polish Jew, Haym Salomon, helped us with their swords and money. Lafayette and de Kalb were truly unselfish Frenchmen who aided our struggling cause. Muhlenberg and that fine general of Frederick the Great of Prussia, Baron Steuben, with their German troops, gave unstinted and invaluable assistance to that same cause; and no American should ever forget the gallant act of the British naval commander who threatened to blow the German squadron out of the water if it fired upon Dewey's fleet at the Battle of Manila Bay in 1898. These were private demonstrations of friendship toward our country.

Now let us turn to the official side of the ledger. The German entries are few but are written in large letters—Utter disregard for American lives and American property on the high seas, during her submarine blockade of England in the Great War; and later—Discrimination against United States citizens in payment of debts.

France's entries include, first: The arbitrary search of American ships and seizure of American seamen and property. These acts culminated in the little known French-American naval war which was brought to an end by Napoleon. Second—An attempt to enlist the aid of Russia and England, during our Civil War, to force the United States government to grant a six months armistice to the Confederacy so that the South could sell its cotton and buy supplies. The success of this move would probably have split the United States into two smaller and weaker nations and would have made ineffective our Monroe Doctrine, with the result that the French conquests of Mexico would have been established in this hemisphere—under the Empire of Maximilian—would today be an accomplished fact. Third—Virtual repudiation of her debts to us, acquired during and after the World War.

On this side of the ledger England chalks up, first: Search of American ships and seizure of one-time British seamen who had become American citizens. This continued action brought on the War of 1812. Second: Unnecessary burning of the city of Washington during the same war. Third: The near declaration of war by England over the unimportant Mason-Siddell incident at the time when the United States was fighting for its life in the American Civil War. Fourth: The virtual repudiation of her war debts.

President Wilson paid our debt to Poland's Kosciusko when he helped to re-form that ancient nation at Versailles. We paid Lafayette with the lives of fifty thousand American boys on the battlefields of France. We paid the brave commander of the British squadron at Manila with thousands upon thousands of cripples, billions in cancelled debts and the disorganization of our whole financial structure. The Kaiser's German Government itself cancelled our debt to Frederick the Great by its cold blooded disregard for our rights as neutrals during the World War.

So if our generation should decide for the second time in our stewardship to risk this country's destruction in a European war, at least let us not make ourselves a laughing stock for history by claiming as an excuse that "we can't let our real friends down."
