MANY WONDERS TO BE FEATURE OF EXHIBIT

Snow actually produced in scaring flame is one of the fascinating feats that will be performed in the Frigidaire exhibit at the 1940 New York World's Fair. This "stunt," and others, will be presented for the entertainment of thousands of visitors expected to attend the company's exhibit in the General Motors building.

Another scientific contradiction of a popularly accepted fact will be the elimination of fire in the operation of a steam engine. A miniature steam engine will be operated with a liquid that requires no fire or heat. Instead, the engine will be frosted and the temperature of the boiler will be 22 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit.

As still another phase of this same demonstration, in what is obviously a reversal of generally accepted ideas, water will be boiled and frozen at the same time without using fire or a refrigerator. During this performance a vegetable will be placed in boiling liquid where it will be frozen.

Carrying these scientific feats into a demonstration more plainly associated with refrigeration, a glass refrigerating system will be used to draw an analogy between the solidification of molten metal and the freezing of ice. A small refrigeration system will be used in conjunction with this demonstration to illustrate how water is changed to ice.

"Tell me, papa, what is a consulting physician?"

"He is a doctor who is called in at the last minute to share the blame."
