UNITED STATES NAVY LARGEST

Figures Show That American Fleet Is Bigger Than Great Britain's

NEW SHIPS BUILDING

Washington — Official figures indicated today that the United States Navy, building at top speed toward "two-ocean" strength, already has become the world's largest both in number of ships and in total tonnage.

Not counting the $500,000,000 of new warships ordered by the navy yesterday and nearly 100 other vessels under construction, Uncle Sam has 395 completed combat ships of 1,327,320 tons.

Latest available figures on the British navy give its strength on June 20 as 313 ships of 1,277,189 tons. These figures are admittedly inexact, but they take into consideration the best information obtainable on losses suffered in Europe's war.

Whether the United States or the British fleet is actually the strongest is a matter of conjecture. That depends on many factors—the age of ships, their design, and capabilities of the crews, among others.

The $500,000,000 new warships order was the biggest in navy history. It covered 11 cruisers, 20 destroyers, 13 submarines and a large seaplane tender. The contracts were closed without competitive bidding, as authorized by the new speed-up legislation which President Roosevelt signed just two hours earlier.
