

SUCCESSFUL PARENTHOOD

By MRS. CATHERINE C. EDWARDS

YOUR CHILDREN'S FUTURE

One of the outstanding movements of this decade, parent education has proved its value over and over in the unprecedented health and vitality of today's children, in their joyous will to learn. But having found a way to improve children's bodies and sharpen their minds we must now use all our wisdom in strengthening their characters, in building up their courage for the tremendous responsibilities of the years of reconstruction ahead.

Parents often become discouraged with trying to mold their children's characters and excuse themselves by saying, "Oh, well, nothing we prepare them for will happen anyway—they'll be up against things we never even thought of." Quite true. We can not foresee the problems of the coming generation. Much as we may wish to we cannot meet them for our children, but we can and must give them training in fortitude, we must encourage in them true generosity of spirit if civilization is to survive through them.

For instance: Are your children learning that growth in character means self discipline, not just a good deed now and then? Are they learning that tolerance begins by being kind to the skinny, unattractive youngsters on the playground? Are they finding out through the fairness practiced in your family group that democracy can be made to work? For this is the best way to prove to them that job of preserving it is a hopeful one.

Another thing, too many of our conceptions of success have been based on an Aladdin's lamp idea of wishes coming true. But as a matter of fact very few successful men and women make their successes in the way they had hoped for. Yet by continuing to give what they have to give, they finally came to find satisfaction in their careers. It may sound old fashioned, but will we not be preparing our children for life as it really is if we stress service rather than gain? Besides, psychologists tell us that feeling useful is one of the first requisites "of" quite true. We can not foresee the problems of the coming generation. Much as we may wish to we cannot meet them for our children, but we can and must give them training in fortitude, we must encourage in them true generosity of spirit if civilization is to survive through them.

For instance: Are your children learning that growth in character means self discipline, not just a good deed now and then? Are they learning that tolerance begins by being kind to the skinny, unattractive youngsters on the playground? Are they finding out through the fairness practiced in your family

World's Smallest Passenger Station In Yadkinville

Yadkinville, Dec. 4.—(Special)—Yadkinville comes first in many things, we have learned as the years go by, and now we have found another one.

Yadkinville has the smallest passenger station in the world. It is so small, in fact, that we predict that more than half the people here have never seen it and probably couldn't find it if they tried, although Yadkinville has a modern passenger and freight service daily.

Two large passenger buses, mostly the latest models, go west and two east each day, as well as two north and two south daily. Four express trucks pass here each day regularly and four to eight on an irregular schedule.

And yet we have the smallest station in the world. And where is it, you ask. Well, it is nailed on a power pole in front of the Yadkin Cafe. It is four by 10 inches in size and contains the one word, "stop"—that is, when one desiring the bus to stop pulls the cord and makes it say "Stop." Some passenger station, don't you think? Well, it's there and you can see it any day without it costing you a cent. It is just a silent sentinel of a world in a hurry about it.

But there is little wonder it is so small, when the facts are brought out. The little Yadkinville station has never had one line of newspaper advertising, and how could you expect the little 4 by 10 to grow without some assistance from somewhere. So far as is known it is the only passenger station in the world that never had a line of advertising—no schedule, no nothing.

There it stands, day by day. If a would-be passenger pulls the

SEEK TO REVOKE 2 SURRY LICENSE

The Brewers and North Carolina Beer Distributors committee has petitioned the Surry county board of commissioners to revoke the retail beer licenses of two Surry county dealers.

Edgar H. Bain, of Goldsboro, state director in charge of the beer industry's "clean up or close up" campaign in North Carolina, filed the petitions with Chairman M. Q. Snow. The petition alleged one dealer had been convicted of liquor law violations and the other dealer operated his place of business in such manner as to constitute a public nuisance.

Since the "clean up or close up" campaign was launched in this state 18 months ago, the committee has cooperated with local authorities in the elimination of 134 undesirable beer outlets—109 by revocation, three by surrender and 23 by refusal to renew licenses.

"Don't you know your way around this town?" asked the sardonic traffic cop.

"No," answered Mr. Chuggins. "If I had known the way around it, you don't suppose I'd have got mixed up in it, do you?"

L. F. Brumfield Goes To Stokes As County Agent

L. F. Brumfield, former Yadkin county farm agent, has been named Stokes county agent, according to announcement of the Stokes board of county commissioners Monday. He succeeds J. F. Brown, who resigned to become associated with Coble Dairies of Lexington, as field representative in charge of production in 26 counties in North Carolina and Virginia.

The county board at the same time named Henry Van Story of Iredell county, as assistant farm agent. He graduated from N. C. State College last spring, where he majored in animal husbandry. He has been active in 4-H Club work in the state and president of the North Carolina club last year. He will be active in dairy work in Stokes county, which has been promoted by Mr. Brumfield during the past 18 months with much success.

Mr. Brumfield was Yadkin county agent for a number of years, during which time he inaugurated dairy farms and milk routes over the county to buy the dairy products. He was also interested in terracing of farms and his work was highly commended in these lines, as well as general farm work.

EXHAUSTED?

Indications are that existing supplies of raw cotton in Italy are likely to be exhausted by December 31, since no large stocks of foreign cotton have been shipped in since the war started.
