CITY TABULATION HIGH

N. C. Rural Returns Sweep By Early Urban Lead Against Measure

OFFICIAL VOTE LISTED

(Official Vote Page 6, Sec. Two)

Surry County polled overwhelmingly for the Schools and Roads bond issuance as North Carolina voted in Gov. Kerr Scott's proposal Saturday. Voters of Surry favored the roads program by 5,479 to 965. For the schools, slightly less ballots were cast but an even better majority was granted. Official tabulations show 5,312 for the schools and 714 against. North Carolina's rural vote was generally reported after the city votes had been tabulated. The construction and improvement program forged ahead in dramatic fashion as returns were reported from the country precincts. The metropolitan vote-chiefly that in Charlotte and other large cities-had put the road bond issue behind in the early counting

Surry Agents Will Be Away Next Week

None of Surry County's farm or home demonstration agents will be in their offices next week until Saturday, it was announced yesterday.

Neill M. Smith, county agent, and Mrs. Grace Pope Brown, home demonstration agent, will attend a state-wide meeting of extension agents at Raleigh from Monday through Friday.

In the meantime, assistant agents, Miss Angela Taylor of the home demonstration office, and Donald M. Halsey and Ophus M. Fulcher of the farm office, will attend camp with members of the 4-H club at Camp Butner.

GUILFORD GETS LARGEST

Paving of 12,000 miles and allweathering surfacing of 35,000 miles of roads will begin in North Carolina about January 1, 1950. Governor W. Kerr Scott said in the wake of Saturday's vote which approved his $200,000,000 rural road bond program.

Also approved was a $25,000,000 school building bond issue, which, unlike the road program, faced no organized opposition.

Governor Scott, the Haw River dairy farmer, once again demonstrated his vote-getting power by going to his "little people," the rural Tar Heels, who voted his program to victory over the opposition of the city vote and that of oig conservative interests. In voting in the road bond issue, Tar Heels alvo voted in a one-cent increase in the State's gasoline tax. The tax increase was contingent upon approval of the road bond.

Bid On Car For Patrol Use Approved

A drive against speedy and reckless driving in the Town of Elkin was launched Monday night by Mayor Richard Atkinson and the board of commissioners with a promise to clamp down heavily on violations. In connection with the campaign—which will be permanent the council authorized the purchase, received bids and accepted a bid for a new patrol car. The car will be delivered on or before July 4, but action against traffic violators will begin immediately in private cars of Elkin police.

Cpl. Sam McKinney, state highway patrolman, appeared before the board and at the request of the council promised the help of the state highway personnel until the patrol car arrives. "It is the intention of the Town traffic problem created by reckless driving which certainly includes excessive speed," Mayor Atkinson said. The mayor said that mothers had appealed to him to attend to
