Death of Mrs. Shannohouse.

The friends of Mr. B. G. Shannohouse sympathize with him in the loss of his wife, Mrs. Bettie Shannohouse, who died at her home on Seventh street, between B and C streets, at 9 o'clock last night, after six weeks' sickness. Mrs. Shannohouse leaves a husband and three children. The funeral services were conducted from the Tryon Street Methodist Church at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

The New Mills.

The new Star Mills, on east Trade street, will soon be in operation. The machinery is all in position, but needs adjusting. This is the new company recently formed in Charlotte, of which C. Gresham is president and W. M. Crowell manager. The mills will turn out a superior article of corn meal, grits, hominy, etc. The bags are neatly stamped with the trade mark and bear the names of the president and manager.

Col. Johnston Home.

Col. Wm. Johnston arrived home on the noon train from the north today. He was interviewed by a News reporter in regard to his talk about running for mayor and Col. Johnston said that he never told any body that he would be a candidate for that office, and the party who said he did was simply mistaken. Col. Johnston said he was approached by various parties and urged to run, but he declined.

ADVENTISTS IN MECKLENBURG.

Negroes who Believed Gabriel was to Blow his Horn—Strange Scene on Dr. Herron's Farm.

Some of the Mecklenburg negroes are Adventists. The doctrine was taught them by a self-made preacher named Samuel Johnston, whose field of operations was on and about the plantation of Dr. I. W. Herron. Rev. Mr. Johnston had been working among the negroes for some weeks past, and finally he succeeded in bringing them all to his belief. He told them that he had been seeing signs from heaven, and that an angel had told him that the world was to come to an end last Tuesday. He talked in a queer manner, and made a number of mysterious signs, and all the darkies believed him.

Monday morning Dr. Herron was puzzled to account for the absence of his farm laborers. Only one lone darkey out of all the families employed on his farm reported for duty, and he explained that all the others were locked in their cabins preparing for judgment day. Dr. Herron then questioned this lone darkey, and got the whole story out of him. Before noon this darkey "caved" and joined a family in a cabin. Dr. Herron went about among the cabins and found all of them locked, while the darkies inside were praying and singing. Tuesday morning, the day upon which the horn was to blow, all was silent in the cabins. The darkies had ceased their devotions and were quietly awaiting the blast from the trumpet. No argument that Dr. Herron could advance had any effect on them. He could not persuade them to come out and go to work, so he put out for town to secure new hands.

"When I left my farm," said Dr. Herron, "there was not a single hand at work. Every negro on the place was locked in a cabin waiting for the coming of judgment day, and nothing could induce them to unlock their doors." The Rev. Mr. Johnston had got their money and was off paralyzing some other neighborhood.

Sent to the Asylum.

Mr. J. W. McCombs, a young commission merchant of this city, who was recently brought home sick from St. Augustine, Fla., was this morning sent to the Western North Carolina Insane Asylum, in charge of Mr. Robert Chapman. Overwork affected Mr. McCombs' mind, and it was thought best to send him to the asylum at once, where he could secure prompt treatment. His malady is of a mild character, and his friends hope that a few weeks' stay in Dr. Murphy's care will result in a complete and permanent restoration.

Drum and Fife Corps.

The Hornet's Nest Riflemen of this city are to have a drum and fife corps, and it will be the only one in the State. Our citizens are subscribing very liberally to the project and the money is being made up rapidly. The corps will consist of six drums and eight fifes. This will be an excellent addition to our already splendid company and will place it ahead of all others in the State.

The Unique Exhibition.

At the entertainment tomorrow evening for the benefit of the Home and Hospital, a performance will be given by the Charlotte Theatrical Club, consisting of Messrs. J. W. Gray, W. C. Timmons, W. G. Gray and W. B. Taylor.

All flowers and refreshments donated should be sent tomorrow afternoon to the Academy of Music.

Performance commences at eight o'clock sharp.

Death of Mrs. Wilson.

Scarcely one of the thousands who have visited Cleveland Springs in years past but remembers Mrs. Wilson, the aged lady who owned the property and who lived in one of the cottages at the springs. She is dead. Her death occurred one day last week. She was 90 years old, and leaves an estate valued at $10,000.

Charlotte Real Estate.

Real estate in Charlotte was never in such demand as it is at present. Property along Trade and Tryon streets is considered especially desirable. Mr. John Fetzer's house, on the extreme northern end of Tryon street, was bought by Dr. C. A. Misenheimer for $2,900. Two years ago it could have been bought for $1,500. Town lots on south Tryon street are selling at big prices, and new houses are going up here and there all along that street.

"If I had $10,000 to spare," said a prominent citizen to a News reporter today, "I would invest it in town lots. They will be worth double the money two years hence."

It is a fact, real estate was never before in such demand in Charlotte.

Col. J. T. Anthony today bought the old Davidson property, opposite the mint, on Trade street. He paid $4,500 for the property, and was offered $5,000 for it half an hour after he bought it. Col. Anthony made this purchase merely as an investment, and it shows his faith in Charlotte.

Washington's Descendants.

One of the interesting features of the Washington Centennial is the bringing out of the kin folks of the great father of his country. There is quite a good representation in North Carolina, and some of the descendants of Washington live in Charlotte. Dr. George Washington Graham is one of them. The New York Herald, which gives an interesting list of Washington's descendants, says this about the North Carolina families: "The same may be said of the North Carolina Washingtons, and especially of the family of Colonel John C. Washington, of Kinston, and of Mrs. William A. Graham, wife of the Governor and Confederate Senator of that name."

The Charlotte Grahams were descended from Lawrence Washington, George Washington's uncle, and the relationship is very easily traced down to the present day. There are a number of other descendants in this State.

Off for the New York Centennial.

Our people will begin to move towards New York in the morning. A party of twenty will leave at 6 o'clock via the Seaboard and Air Line, taking the bay steamers at Portsmouth, and a party of about fifteen will leave tomorrow afternoon through the Piedmont Air Line. Among those who expect to represent Charlotte at the big show are: Col. Chas. W. Bradshaw, Mayor McDowell, Mr. W. R. Tallafiero, Mr. H. Baruch, Mr. Harrison Watts, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Eccles, Capt. T. R. Robertson, Dr. R. J. Brevard, Messrs Baumgarten, S. Grose, W. N. Prather, C. A. Dixon, W. A. Sossamon and wife, W. P. Dixon and wife, Judge Bynum, H. S. Bryan, Mrs. R. McDowell, Mrs. Grier, J. A. S. Solomon and wife, Dick Carson and I. Henderson.

St. Michael's Vestrymen.

At a meeting last night of the congregation of St. Michael's Chapel (colored) the following vestrymen were elected: J. E. King, Lewis Perry, Rufus Hyatt, C. C. Grier, Paschal Fowkes, Wm. McDowell, J. E. King and Lewis Perry were elected wardens. The delegates to the convention have not yet been named.

About The Horse.

Charlotte people are taking a good deal of stock in fine horses lately, and of course they want to know all about how to treat a horse when he is sick. Dr. James Merritt, of Nashville, Tenn., will have some interesting points to give about the horse at the court house tonight. His lecture is free, and all who are interested in horses should hear it.

Rath at Concord.

The cantata of Rath is to be presented by the Local talent of Concord, at Caron's hall tonight. The company is in excellent practice and they expect a large house. The cantata will be particularly pretty, being in the style of the ancient Jews, while the music, consisting of solos, duets and choruses, will come in with charming variety.
