STOMACH TROUBLE FOR FIVE YEARS

Majority of Friends Thought Mr. Hughes Would Die, But One Helped Him to Recovery.

Pomeroyton, Ky.—In interesting advices from this place, Mr. A. J. Hughes writes as follows: "I was down with stomach trouble for five (5) years, and would have sick headache so bad, at times, that I thought surely I would die. I tried different treatments, but they did not seem to do me any good. I got so bad, I could not eat or sleep, and all my friends, except one, thought I would die. He advised me to try Thedford's Black-Draught, and quit taking other medicines. I decided to take his advice, although I did not have any confidence in it.

I have now been taking Black-Draught for three months, and it has cured me—haven't had those awful sick headaches since I began using it. I am so thankful for what Black-Draught has done for me."

Thedford's Black-Draught has been found a very valuable medicine for derangements of the stomach and liver. It is composed of pure, vegetable herbs, contains no dangerous ingredients, and acts gently, yet surely. It can be freely used by young and old, and should be kept in every family chest.

KING SOLOMON REFUTED

By THELMA SELIG.

"I've been downtown all day," sighed Loretta, wearily, as she sank into the Morris chair. "And I've discovered a brand new thing."

"If you get it patented with my help you must give me half the royalties," her brother informed her. "My services come high."

"The brand new thing that I have discovered isn't patentable," said Loretta regretfully. "However, it might be an excellent theme for a book or an essay."

"If you're going to be a highbrow I'll have to be excused. What on earth happened downtown?"

"I have learned," explained Loretta impressively, "that women have been terribly slandered for thousands of years. People have said and sung and written that women have a great deal of vanity—and there isn't a word of truth in it!"

"This is new to me," declared her brother, becoming interested. "How did you find it out?"

"You needn't talk superciliously," said Loretta. "You, who were so flattered because that little Miss Harris said you looked like an aristocrat. I have just been taking observations."

"The first woman I noticed particularly had one of these new lemon colored hats on—you know, the kind that has a trimming of blue and green and red. Well, she herself was the color of an orange and she stood before a mirror smiling at herself, perfectly delighted with a hat that made her look 20 years too old and the shade of yellow that is the very most distressing."

"Next to her there stood a woman on the shady side of fifty, who wore a very extreme Dutch neck and showed forth more bones and wrinkles than are included in most textbooks on anatomy. This woman was fat around her waist, so, of course, she wore panniers and all kinds of looped up draperies. She looked like a bag of meal surmounted by a picket fence.

"I would have laughed aloud if I hadn't been struck dumb by another woman who approached wearing a terra cotta coat, a crimson hat and a green dress. She had a purple feather in her hat and her hair was red, and she was a sight to behold. I began to look at women more intently then and I tried to reason it out. Why does a woman who has a bony neck attempt to wear these Queen Elizabeth ruffs that make the neck long and thin looking, and then cap the climax with a Dutch neck which gets chapped and raw in our winter winds? Can she think that she looks well?"

"She won't be well very long, that's one sure thing," replied Loretta's brother.

"Then there are the hats," Loretta went on. "Words fall me when I come to the hats. Can't women see how ridiculous they look with a bamboo stick sticking into everybody's eyes? What makes them think they look sweet in hats banded over one eye or slanted down over their foreheads as flat as a plate? Why do sorrow women wear green and lemon or old rose and lavender combinations? Simply because they have not a speck of vanity, that's all. If they had the least bit of vanity, then I'm sure that nothing on earth could tempt them to put such things on, no matter if they were a hundred times the style. Then there's hair."

"Colored wigs?"

"I don't mean anything so absolutely silly," Loretta said, scornfully. "I mean those fat curls stuck down on the cheek and those wads of hair over each ear."

"They're wearing initials on their cheeks now. Have you seen them? They make you almost believe they have been branded on."

"You contend that it's lack of vanity that makes it?" queried her brother. "Why not lack of taste?"

"Because that would be discouraging," Loretta said, coolly. "I should not like to think that for a minute. I prefer to believe they lack vanity. For myself, I agree with a gentleman who confessed to a man friend what he thought they looked like."

"And what was that?"

"That," Loretta said, rising, with a sigh. "I decline to repeat. I do not believe in strong language for women. I say nothing. I just think."—Chicago Daily News.
