FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1914.

New Bern makes a bid for the paragraders' union and if there is any chance of having to walk home after celebrations are over we say make it New Bern.

Now since the doctors have decided that not eating beans causes pellagra there will be as many people begin eating beans as left off eating corn when it was thought corn meal was the cause of it.

The mails are clogged with pro German literature at the present time and if we believe what it says everybody is wrong except Germany. It continues to increase in volume we will have to enlarge our waste box.

The last word to the voters before going to the polls tomorrow is don't forget to vote for the amendments. Let us vote to adopt the entire list and bring our constitution up to date and allow the needed changes to be made.

The negroes are registering a kick against the wooden "Jim Crow" cars giving as their reason for objecting to them that because of their being sandwiched between steel coaches they get it in the neck whenever there is a wreck.

Those who are inclined to blame Wilson for the low prices of cotton should remember that the price of cotton during McKinley's term in office was 4.90 cents a pound which is much lower than it will go now and there was no war to blame it on then either.

November is usually connected with killing turkeys and it seems from present indications that the Allies are going to celebrate this year by dividing up Turkey and having a regular feast. England has already warned Turkey that it would be an end to her if she entered the war.

To hear some people talk you would think they were millionaires when in reality they are hard run to pay their laundry bills.

Just like there was not already enough trouble across the water, Mt. Vesuvius is reported to be in eruption again.

A Good Roads Congress meets in Atlanta soon, delegates will be in attendance from all over the country and the gains in improved roads will be discussed as well as improved methods of treating and building roads. This is one thing a country cannot have too much of and the way good roads are increasing is very encouraging to the promoters.

The latest exploit of Roosevelt is seeing the war plans of two nations. The plans are for the capture of American ports and he uses this information as the basis of a warning to the United States to prepare for war. We wonder what Roosevelt will use next time he wants to get before the public eye. Strange that he should be the one to see these plans, too, isn't it.

The man who votes right today can sleep with a clear conscience tonight.

DIVERSIFIED FARMING.

Secretary Houston in a recent address delivered before the National Dairy Show association declared that all farmers were profiting by the war prices except the Southern Cotton growers. He gave as an explanation that this war on account of their failure to diversify their crops.

The farmer who confines his crop growing to any one kind is running a pretty grave risk of losing money on it. Almost any one can recall instances of certain crops being sold at a loss if sold at all. Almost every year the prices are different on crops and the farmer who depends on one crop loses about as often as he gains while the farmer who diversifies is never without a good market with good prices for part of his crop at least. Then there are some farmers who try to hit the good price years, they think they can tell beforehand which crop will bring good prices and accordingly plant heavily of that crop. It seems that the lesson would be learned sometime but already there are farmers who are planning to change from cotton to tobacco next year and if a large number do this there will be a shortage of cotton and more tobacco than can be sold. This could be avoided if the farmers were to get together and agree to so regulate their crops as not to overproduce any crop. They should diversify and try new crops for which there is always a market. They should turn to stock raising for there is no more promising field offered than this. Farmers are inclined to buy rather than to raise their meat. The same can be said of other things and until the farmers look after this matter more and stop devoting their whole time to raising money crops there is going to be trouble.

If these hints are carried out and a determined effort made to increase the stock in the south and in addition diversify the crops the farmer will not only come into power but he will get more money and have better markets. These lessons have almost been forced upon the farmer this year and if after what they pass through they remain in the same old rut they may be said to be almost past redemption.

Are you thinking and talking of building and loan this week. The eighteenth series of the Home Building and Loan Association opens next Saturday, and the mark is set for a thousand shares in that series. There ought to be that many, for the shares earn a little above 6-1/2 per cent net above expenses and taxes. What else can you invest in that will pay that well? Another, and even better feature, is that while this per cent is being earned, the money paid in each week on shares is loaned right out to some one to help build or pay for a house.

Mexico has not yet settled her troubles, they are having meetings and conventions trying to come to some settlement but those participating are afraid the other fellow will get the advantage.

IN MEMORY of ALSTON GRIMES

Col. Alston Grimes died at Washington Hospital, Washington, N. C., October 20, 1914. Funeral services were held in St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Washington.

His interment was in the old family burying ground at Grimesland. The burial services at the grave were conducted by the masons of whom there were large delegations from the Washington, Greenville, Grimesland, Ayden and Paeonius lodges. A large concourse of sad-hearted friends from many miles around gathered there to pay a last loving tribute to a helpful, loyal friend, in whose death they felt a deep personal bereavement.

Col. Grimes was the oldest son of General Bryan Grimes and Charlotte Emily Bryan, a daughter of the late Hon. John H. Bryan, and was born in Raleigh, North Carolina, February 25, 1866. On June thirtieth, nineteen fourteen, he was married to Miss Anna B. Lawrence of Ayden, North Carolina, who survives him. He was educated by private tutors and at the Bingham School, Lynch's School and the University of North Carolina. With the exception of a few years which he spent in the employment of the Seaboard Air Line Railway in Raleigh and in Portsmouth, Virginia, he was engaged in farming and kindred occupations in Beaufort and Pitt counties.

He belongs to Grimesland Lodge A. F. and A. M. and was a member of the Greenville Chapter of the Royal Arch Masons. He was an ardent mason and his life was an exemplification of the principles of that great order. He never sought public office, preferring the peaceful walks of a farmer's life in the old ancestral home and the quiet service of his neighbors. He was aide-de-camp on the staff of Governor Fowle and of Governor Holt. For many years he served his neighborhood as a justice of the peace magnifying the office and using it to settle disagreements among his neighbors because of his high character and the bold without recourse to the courts, confidence of his neighbors in his justice and judgment, his decisions were almost always accepted by them without question or appeal. He served for many years as Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee of his township and was an active and influential worker in every campaign. He was secretary of the board of trustees of his community school and took a leading part in securing a local tax and a bond issue for the erection of a beautiful modern brick school building, which was nearing completion at the time of his death. He was a patriot without selfish ambition, giving himself freely to the up-building of his community, and to the service of his people.

He was liberal in his contributions to churches and schools, donating during the past twenty years a number of valuable sites for these for both races. He was deeply interested in the old confederate soldiers, giving freely of his means to relieve their needs and to minister to their pleasure. He was the open-handed helper of the poor, he was the sympathetic friend of the sick and the helpless.

He was a shining example of that class of quiet citizens that, by devoting their lives and strength to the unselfish service of their own communities and the faithful and conscientious performance of the simple, every day duties that lie next to them, adorn and dignify manhood and constitute the backbone of state and nation. He was so quiet, modest, and unassuming that only those who knew him well appreciated his real worth. Of a genial, lovable disposition, he was always a favorite among his friends from early boyhood. Generous, unselfish, warm-hearted, he was loved as few men have been. Capable, true, and absolutely dependable, he held his friends as only such men can. No one doubted his word. No man was ever wronged by his deed. As gentle as a woman in his nature, he was as inflexible as adamant in his convictions and as courageous as a lion in advocacy of the right as he saw it.

His life was largely spent in loving service to others. So peacefully flowed its current that men scarcely understood until he was gone how lofty was his soul, how deep was his heart. His monument is in the hearts of his neighbors, his reward in the hands of his Maker.

"God accept him, Christ receive him."

Death of Capt. White

Capt. Charles A. White one of Greenville's oldest and best known citizens died about 8:30 o'clock, Wednesday night, at his home on Dickinson avenue. He was a little past 81 years old and had for some time been feeble with age. Still his death came almost without a moments warning, as during the day Wednesday he had seemed as well as usual and had taken a walk up town in the afternoon. After supper his son, Mr. J. B. White, was alone with him, and as he reclined in an arm chair was giving him a massage. Suddenly with an exclamation in which he called the name of his son, he threw his head back and began gasping. Physicians were quickly summoned but before they arrived he had passed away.

Capt. White was a native of Pitt county spent his early years on the farm and taught school. He moved to Greenville about 35 years ago, and engaged in mercantile business, taking rank as one of our leading merchants and cotton buyers. In 1894 he retired from business, turning his store over to his son, Mr. S. T. White, who conducted it for some time, but he continued to take interest in affairs and was as active as his health would permit.

He served during the whole of the civil war rising to the rank of Captain. He had an honorable record and was faithful and loyal to his state.

Capt. White was born in Sept. 1833 and in 1864 he married Miss Louise A. Cory. His wife died in 1911, and he is now survived by two sons, Messrs. S. T. and J. B. White, and one daughter, Mrs. Lula Fleming.

The funeral was held from the home at 4 o'clock this afternoon, conducted by Rev. J. M. Daniel and Rev. C. M. Rock.

The active pall bearers were—N. W. Jackson, C. S. Carr, F. J. Forbes, D. E. House, J. L. Wooten, R. C. Flanagan, J. L. Little, D. L. James, C. O. H. Laughinghouse, C. W. Wilson, W. H. Long, O. L. Joyner, E. B. Ficklin, D. S. Smith, J. L. Starkey, W. B. Wilson.

Honorary—Gov. T. J. Jarvis, Dr. McGonul, Louis Lawrence, P. C. Harding, J. G. Moye.

Misses Zilphia Hemby and Olivia Moye returned to their home here yesterday after a visit to Mrs. Moore at Kinston.

T. R. TO TELL INVASION PLANS. Promises Explanation of His Warning of Attack on Our Coast

New York, Nov. 2.—Colonel Roosevelt was asked to speak at more length of the plans which he had seen prepared by 2 nations for the capture and holding of New York and San Francisco for ransom, which he told about in his stumping speech at Princeton, N. J. He wasn't ready to amplify this statement yet, he said, but would later.

The colonel said that substantially he had been correctly quoted when he was reported as saying: "I myself have seen the plans of two of the countries now engaged in the European war to invade the United States, capture our greater cities and hold them for ransom, considering that our standing army was too small to be dangerous. I have seen the definite plans for the capture and ransoming of New York and San Francisco."

"I cannot take time to amplify it at present," he said. "In a week or so however, I hope to make that statement the subject of more exact explanation."
