A Choice Between Two Roads

By F. A. MITCHEL

Having occasion to journey through a portion of Tennessee, the region of the Cumberland plateau, I was obliged on one occasion to travel by wagon. A countryman with some supplies was going over the route I proposed to take, and when I offered him good pay to take me with him he accepted the proposition.

We hadn't got far on our route when we came to a house standing beside the road, and a girl carrying a carpet-bag—it was an old timer, really made of carpet—came out of the house, evidently to meet the wagon. She was "dressed up"—that is, she had on her best clothes instead of the calico dress and sunbonnet of the typical southern country girl.

"Josh," she said, "I reckon I'll go with yo'."

"All right, Sairy. Climb up yere."

There was room for three on the seat, but since my driver—Saunders was his name—and the girl seemed inclined to be spoony I removed myself to a soft bale of some kind of goods in the wagon behind them, saying that I would have a smoke.

Josh and Sairy, as they called each other, were evidently enjoying the trip together. Neither gave me any information as to their relationship or how the girl knew that he would pass the house where she joined us at that day and hour.

Having nothing to do, I amused myself trying to work out the relationship between them. While they said nothing directly to indicate it, they said a great deal indirectly. At one time the girl would chat about a certain farm, mentioning all sorts of devices for making the house on it attractive. She would put up some curtains she had that would fit very neatly and paper several of the rooms herself—she had done papering before—and line the porch with flowers, and make a lot of improvements besides. Josh assented to all this every time she stopped long enough to give him an opportunity, saying: "Just so. That would look mighty fine—beautiful." But it seemed to me that he was listening to a story rather than facts. If she were picturing a future home in which he was to participate he gave me the idea that he considered the girl to be a rainbow chaser.

Striking a crossroad, we found a man sitting on a fence whittling a stick. He took no notice of us till we came opposite; then he said:

"Howdy, Josh? Howdy, Sairy?"

"Howdy, Mart?" said Josh, pulling up.

"Whar yo' goin'?" asked Mart.

"We're goin' to Jasper."

"What yo' goin' to do thar—get married?"

Josh looked at the girl, but since she did not seem inclined to make a reply he did so himself. "We allowed we might get married if we can find a pation to marry us."

"I reckoned so. That's the reason I jst thought I'd wait fo' yo' yere."

I changed my position so that I could see the girl's face. All the light heartedness had gone out of her. I inferred that the man sitting on the fence was a claimant for her herself, but he was a red headed, freckled, loose jointed, disagreeable looking fellow, and I didn't see how he could have any chance with Josh, who was quite good looking and otherwise attractive. Neither Josh nor Sairy made any comment on Mart's last statement, and presently he drew led:

"See here, Sairy, this has been goin' on long enough. Yo' see the signboards pointin' the way? The road yo're goin' leads to Jasper. Either one to Chattanooga. Air yo' goin' to Jasper with Josh or air yo' goin' to Chattanooga with me?"

There being no immediate reply to this, there was a dead silence. It was evident that the two men were waiting for the girl to decide between them. Presently Mart added:

"This suds the foolin'. Yo' go to Jasper or to Chattanooga, and whichever way yo' go yo' stay. There's no go back."

Half a minute elapsed before the decision came and then not in words, Josh must have seen it in the girl's face, for I saw him reach down under the seat, take out Sairy's carpetbag and hand it to her. At the same time Mart approached and handed her down on to the road. Then Josh drove on. Looking back, I saw Mart and Sairy trudging along on the road to Chattanooga.

Taking the seat I had vacated in favor of the girl, I handed Josh a cigar.

"Smoke?"

"Reckon I will."

"What does all this mean?" I asked when he had lighted up.

"Well, there's some winnins has a powerful influence over some men and some men over some winnins. That gal has been waitin' to marry me fo' a long spell, but that feller wouldn't let her. Did yo' hear her talkin' about the house we was to live in arter we was married? I'd heerd all that afore I knowed it didn't mean nothin'. I knowed Mart was a waterin' her and had his spies out on her and she wouldn't get far afore he'd stop her."

"Does she fear him?"

"No. If he'd 'a' tried to force her I'd put a bullet thru him."

I asked Josh if Mart noticed the girl, explained to him what hypothesis I was making, but all he had to say to this was:

"I dunno."
