-The strong wind last evening prostrated one of the fire-tried elms on South Elm street.

-Bear in mind the Festival tomorrow night at the Presbyterian Chapel on Asheboro street.

-There was an alarm of fire last night at about 9:30 o'clock, which emptied a number of houses and put a number of citizens on the war path, but on reaching headquarters it was found that the fire was confined to a small outhouse on the premises of Mr. Howard, West Market street, and which was soon subdued, with what damage, if any, we did not learn.

-Do not forget the entertainment to be given by the ladies of the W. C. T. U. at the Courtnouse to night. The ice cream will be delicious and the music will be fine, the Greensboro Cornet Band being engaged to furnish it.

-A gentleman who is well known here as a first-class drummer, on tak-ing his leave this morning for his ville. work down the line of one of our railroads, made a statement to the effect that while some people were a little restive under the repeated calls ot drummers, they ought to be able to endure it, because the drummer had to bear the burden of his work continually. Just so. The men who occasionally torture us with their hor rid music are nearer to themselves than they are to us : and we have but to remember that those Althy and loathsome characters whose mesociation we detest are bound to themselves night and day forever. Such thoughts would serve to reconcile us, not only to the repeated calls of drummers, but to many another real- the State.

Music Draws .- It is not a frequent hing that we are very forcibly reminded of old times and old ways by the sayings and doings of the people of this generation, but when, on yesterday, a man with a load of melons sat in his wagon and began playing -Mr. Sikes' house on Greene St. on his "fiddle," the picture of the It is not so very long ago as some of fine Vase Lamps for the remainder of this might think it was when some fashions now quite obsolete were very common, such as the corn husking, the quilting, the house-raising, the muster and the election. Those were the days of pies-sure enough pies, known for further comment. Buy once and They had chickens in them—the you will have no other Bread. Respectfully, chicken pies did; but it was the pumpkin pie that was found everywhere. But the fiddle, that is what used to draw in those days, not only at the quilting, but on election days, too; for there were numerous carts and wagons containing apple cider and ginger cakes -cent cakes for convenience, and five cent cakes for convenience. The fiddle was a big advertising card, and the man who could command a good muscular fiddler generally drew the crowd and the place now, since he has just received a drew the cider. "Old Dan Tucker" hadn't yet come into the "diggins," but his illustrious predecessors were -Mr. jas. W. Albright has been still in office. With the fiddling and ered up their cast-off vests and hats and trace trains and rattled off homeclear profit on the day's work.

> Such were our recollections when, on yesterday, we saw a countrymen astride a melon wagon drawing his fiddle bow with all his might. It was a novel sight for these times.
