

A paper for all people, but especially to meet the desire which man is known to entertain for a non-political sheet, the WORKMAN will strive to go into every house, leaving to other papers the science of politics, giving the news in a brief and holding itself responsible to the moral sense of the community for its utterances.

THE WORK OF THE LITTLE BLACK DOG.—Greensboro is making a reputation for itself in a line entirely new and peculiar. We have already chronicled the fact that while the experiment was going on with the miniature fire engine opposite the Benbow House one evening last week, one of the little pet black dogs of the city went off into a tantrum of some sort and bit four people—all perhaps within the space of five minutes. At least two of the bites were more or less serious.

Since the occasion alluded to, another dog, very closely resembling the first, has bitten two of our citizens, quite painfully, viz: Mess. Jno. Davis and Jas. W. Albright. So far we understand that these dogs are in the "enjoyment of life and liberty and the pursuit of happiness," notwithstanding that they have earned decapitation with a large excess of deserts left over and to spare. These little black dogs, with sharp tails, sharp ears and snakey eyes, have grown so thick in Greensboro, that in certain favorite resorts they are almost rank enough to be harvested with a reap hook, and, perhaps with a few exceptions, a reap hook could not be better employed than gathering them in for the phosphate heap.

The reader will remember that among the number of those who were bitten last Thursday was a stranger, a gentleman from Chicago, Mr. A. W. Davison, representing the firm of H. E. Bucklen & Co., wholesale patent medicine dealers of the city named. Mr. Davison was more severely bitten than any of the rest, and he went immediately to the drug store of Hunter & Michaux, where he applied ammonia to his wound and then had it cauterized. Soon after receiving the wound Mr. Davison went to Raleigh, and we heard no more from him, until last night when there came a letter addressed to the editor of this paper making inquiries after the other three persons, and giving a report of his own case. His letter is dated from the Yarbore House, September 20th. He says his wound is very bad; that he has been confined to his bed with it since Saturday, and cannot bear his weight on his foot. On Friday he tried a mad-stone, which did not adhere—Thinks he will be out in a week. He then adds: "Please give me the name of the party owning the dog. It is a bad delay for my business and an expensive vacation."

We gave the particulars of the performances of the little black dog the next day after the occurrence, believing it our duty to do so; and, as if to reinforce the case, two other persons were bitten within a few days by another dog of the same stock with the first. To what extent this newly developed mania for human flesh will run, and whether what has happened already be not symptomatic of incipient hydrophobia, we are not scientist enough to tell. But of two things we are sure, 1st. That no dog that has bitten even one person on the street without provocation should be permitted to live an hour thereafter, and that if the two dogs of which we have spoken be allowed still to go at large, and shall add further injury to what they have already inflicted, the authorities of the city will be held responsible for the actual consequences.

—Just a bit of Pres. Cleveland's Civil Service Reform, or something every way practically as efficient, seems to be needed in some parts of our country just at this time. The latest complaint comes to us from Pomona, which is the junction of the Salem Branch and the North Carolina railroad, three miles from Greensboro, where the Daily Workman has had a hard time of it in reaching its subscribers of late. Men who subscribe and pay for newspapers have a right to complain when men who have nearly broken their necks to get into office show their unfitness by the plainest neglect of duty. There are plenty of men on the outside who would fill the bill to the letter if they had some of these places. Let all careless agents stand from under.

How could this grand combination of inspiring circumstances and surroundings fail to awaken awe, reverence and adoration, toward the supreme Architect of the universe? It did not. We knelt and vocalized our prayers, praise and thanksgiving. I must stop here, survey this huge pile from summit to base and report more to-morrow, if you desire it. In the meantime let none who can come fail to do so, and not take time to do it. And let all Greensboro who come on the excursion vote to start at five o'clock, p. m., and then do it if the nearest attainable satisfaction is desired. F. S. BLAIR.

On the Apex of the Pinnacle.

PILOT MOUNTAIN, Sept. 20. MESSRS. EDITORS: While writing I am seated on the solid rock, and have another solid one to my right, just the right height and distance from me for my writing desk.

Mr. Walter Mendenhall, of your city, and I were sent, in the interest of the Greensboro and Summerfield Sunday Schools, to spy out the land about the Pilot preparatory to the Big Excursion soon to start from Greensboro. Under the genial and gentlemanly conduct of Capt. Murphy, of the C. F. and Y. V. railroad, delivered us in safety at Dalton, where we took one of his rigs and drove to Mr. Collins', one mile from the top of the Pilot.

We arose refreshed before four o'clock. At four o'clock we set out with a lantern, without a guide, and reached the base of the pinnacle, when the oil in our lamp was gone, so we scaled the precipitous height in the darkness of the early morning.

As we ascended through the dense, tall forests of hickory, poplar and chestnut to see the stars peeping through the foliage above at the two pinnacles wending their slow and solitary way up the mountain's steep ascent, reminded us that the Omniscient eye was on us. The east is replete with the rising King of Day, and the west smother with the shade and shadow. The Yarkin flows in serpentine and silvery outlines at our feet. The loud clarion of the early hunter's horn comes clear and shrill on this cool September morn. The baying of hounds and the crowing of chanticleer, are heard in every direction. The howling of cattle and the linking of bells are heard from every quarter. The cutting of the morning wood for the first fire is heard from many a hut and farm-house yard. The yell of the hunter's dog and the chirry notes and whoops of the boys come up from the dense, dense and distant forests below.

The leading mountainside breeze, as it comes unobscured on the wings of the morning, makes us feel as if we were coming up this trail of dust warmed us to full perspiration.

The gentle breeze, as it fans the expanse of trees, produces a constant roar like the distant moan of the sea, or the perpetual roar of Niagara's flood, as I have heard it in the distance coming in at my hotel window in the still night. Some one had lighted his fire below us in the east, and sat down in his humble cot to write away a half hour picking his banjo, apparently for our entertainment, though he knew it not, while the housewife plied with busy care her breakfast things. "Night, sable goddess, now ceases to stretch forth her leaden sceptre o'er a slumbering world." The smoke is curling up from a hundred chimneys. The brilliant brightness of the orient is made refulgent with gladness and glory, as the King of Day rises above the distant and cloudless horizon to his regal throne, in splendid and faultless majesty.

How could this grand combination of inspiring circumstances and surroundings fail to awaken awe, reverence and adoration, toward the supreme Architect of the universe? It did not. We knelt and vocalized our prayers, praise and thanksgiving.

THE SENEGAMIANS.—The Senegamiens are trying a plausible scheme for rapidly spreading civilization throughout their great domain in Senegambia. They argue that the quickest way to subdue the country will be to educate the children of the chiefs. These children will some day be persons of much influence, and the French argue that if they can train their minds and imbue them with right notions of progress in their youth, they will in the future, be splendid missionaries of civilization. They have, therefore, established schools in the most important towns from the ocean for a distance of 600 or 700 miles inland, in which the children of the chiefs are receiving instruction at the expense of the French government. Col. Gallieni, who has organized these schools, says he thinks they will prove the most powerful means of extending French influence.

The Verdict Unanimous. W. D. Sutt, Druggist, Bippus, Ind., testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism of 10 years' standing." Abraham Haro, Druggist, Belleville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 30 years' experience, is Electric Bitters. Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at Hunter & Michaux's Drug Store."

It is shallowness that decides instantly, and that always thinks it knows what it is about.—Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney. The sight of an ugly inflamed boil or sore, to say nothing of its dangerous tendency, should induce any sufferer to try Lassar's, the infallible remedy for these troublesome blood disorders. Durham Merchant's Experience.

Mr. J. F. Conrad is a partner of the well-known grocery firm of J. C. Bowers & Co., Durham, N. C. His character and standing in the business world is a voucher for his entire truth. For years he suffered with rheumatism in the chest. He tried what he says about the cure: Rheumatism in the chest bothered me for years. Last spring I took a full course of S. S. S. and got great relief from the pain. I regard S. S. S. as an excellent blood medicine. J. F. CONRAD.

More Unsolicited Testimony.

[Danville (Va.) Times, April 21, 1887.] "S. S. S.—By the way, that valuable medicine cured one of our citizens who had upwards of thirty boils. He tried various other medicines and several mineral waters, but nothing else afforded him the desired relief. This testimony we give unsolicited, and without the knowledge of the proprietors." The skin can be kept soft, white, and free from taint of perspiration by adding Darby's Phylactic Fluid to the water used in bathing. It removes all offensive smell from the feet or any part of the body. Used as a tooth-wash it will harden the gums, preserve the teeth, cure tooth ache and make the breath pure and sweet. Cures chafing and inflammation, Piles, Scald Feet, Corns, etcetera.

A BOLD DEED.—We learn of an act of heroism on the part of a son of Capt. Steele, which deserves special mention and recognition. John Wilson, the fireman of the engine, for some purpose had descended into the well, where he was overcome by the foul air and to all appearances became a dead man. No one on the premises would descend into the well for the purpose of putting a rope around the negro, until Mr. Will Steele came up when he at once volunteered his services. He performed the daring feat successfully, and was gratified to see the negro drawn out and restored to consciousness. A few moments more of delay would have been fatal to him, as life was almost extinct when he was brought out.—Monroe Enquirer and Express.
