

THE DAILY WORKMAN.

J. S. MICHAUX, Local Editor

A paper for all people, but especially to meet the desire which many are known to entertain for a non-political sheet, the WORKMAN will strive to go into every house, leaving to other papers the science of politics, giving the news in brief and holding itself responsible to the moral sense of the community for its utterances.

—“A par of license to git married wid,” is the way a certain young darkey delivered himself to the Clerk of the Hustings Court of Danville, according to the Register. Not long after, the same darkey returned, wanting the clerk to take the license back and return him his dollar. He said the ole woman “had done busted de weddin.”

An effort is to be made at Auburn Theological Seminary to improve the reading of candidates for the ministry. The late H. W. Van Buren bequeathed to the Seminary the sum of $3,000, the interest to be awarded annually to the best reader, or best two readers in each of the three classes. The trial reading is to be from the Bible, Milton and Shakespeare. This is a movement in the right direction. Good reading in the pulpit is almost as important as good speaking.

But of all the nauseating stuff that we ever tried to swallow is what is by some people called improved reading. If Mr. Van Buren's bequest is to be employed in giving undue emphasis to the subject of reading, as though a young man needed nothing but that, and shall encourage the posturing and eye-ball rolling that we have sometimes seen, the good man had better have invested in some other line of business. The reading “enterprise,” as has been said of some of our industries, “is yet in its infancy.” We might add, is pretty much of a squalling baby at that. Not that there is no such thing as improved reading, but that the cultivation is often a pitiable failure, running into ridiculous extremes of gesture and intonation.

A WEEK OF PRAYER.—The Evangelical Alliance has issued from the London office the invitation for the Week of United and Universal Prayer, for 1888. The following are the topics suggested: Sunday, January 1st, Luke xxi. 28; 1 Peter iv. 7. Monday, Jan. 2d, Thanksgiving. Tuesday, January 3d, Confession. Wednesday, January 4th, Prayer for families. Thursday, January 5th, Prayer for the church of God. Friday, January 6th, Intercession for missions. Saturday, January 7th, Intercessions for nations. Sunday sermons: I. Cor. xv. 58. In suggesting these topics the note is made that the “subjects are suggested for general adoption, in order that the supplications of the Lord's people may be of one accord during the week; but the varying circumstances of different countries where meetings are held may necessitate their amplification or alterations in detail.”

The mild powers cura.—If a cathartic is needed to rid the blood of impurity and to stimulate the action of the liver use Laxador. Price 25 cents.

If there were called a meeting of babies and the young children and the question put to vote “who was their greatest benefactor” the loud and unanimous vote would be “Dr. Bull,” for he gave us his wonderful “Baby Syrup.”

often need some safe cathartic and tonic to avert approaching sickness, or to relieve colic, headache, sick stomach, indigestion, dysentery, and the complaints incident to childhood. Let the children take Simmons Liver Regulator and keep well. It is purely vegetable, not unpleasant to the taste and safe to take alone or in connection with other medicine.

Youth is the time to serve the Lord. Remember this, oh, youth!

More about the Pilot.

(Concluded.)

We came down the steep descent from the base of the pinnacle to the spring, where we hope to picnic on the 30th, in zig-zag lines, with great rapidity and jollity. It required 20 minutes to ascend this space, and five minutes to descend the same.

We then made haste slowly down, down to our lodging place at Mr. Culler's, which we reached weak in our knees, but full of enthusiasm and vigor. It is now 8 o'clock, a. m. Four hours is quite a while to wait for breakfast. We arrange our toilet, begin to break our fast at once, but finish much later on.

Next, we drive to Marion, a village five miles beyond Culler's, on the railroad, where there is manifest activity that deserves success.

Mr. Marion is building a hotel, as is Mr. Whitaker, for the accommodation of the traveling and visiting public.

We finished spying out the land. I said to Walter: “We have compassed this mountain long enough,” so we took our departure from Marion, still taking observations, till we came to the point where it now seems to us is the nearest approach of the railroad to the stupendous pile—about two or two and a half miles from the summit—one mile above Culler's. This, too, is at the point where the beautiful symmetry of the mountain appears to the best advantage. It approaches here its most perfect pyramidal form. And when small clouds, as they did this afternoon, float in the air, and their shadows are cast upon the mountain's side, there is an enchanting, fairy-like spectacle presented to the charmed beholder, in the interchange of shade and sunshine. These shadows chase one and another up, and down, across or athwart the sloping sides like things of beauty, which they are, on the dark, green foliage of this mountain's autumnal forests. From this point of view, and others, too, we might quote again from the same author:

“All-shadowing Pilot! high and lone and cold, Thou rearest thy form in grandeur, and the light Which glides thy brow at sunset, as of old, Shall be to thee a diadem all bright, Amid the ages distant and untold, To guide the pilgrim's dim and falling sight Along the battlement.”

I also agree with what my young friend and companion, Walter M., thought about the appearance from this point: “It stands with a wonderfully self-complacent air, in its grand sublimity and silent majesty.”

And, inasmuch as the printer ignored, unintentionally, no doubt, the effort in my last, to get off a little rhyme about the “hunter's horn” and the “cool September morn,” I will quote a little from good authority, “Coleridge's Hymn to Mount Blanc,” transferring it, in my imagination, to the Pilot, the Mount Blanc of Stokes:

O dread and silent Mount! I gazed upon thee Till thou, still present to the bodily sense, Didst vanish from my thoughts entranced in prayer: I worshipped invisible alone. Yet, like some sweet, beguiling melody, So sweet we do not know we are listening to it, Thou, the meanwhile, wast blending with my thought. Yea, with my life, and life's own secret joy— Till the dilating soul enrapt, transfused Into the mighty vision passing there, As in her natural form, swelled vast to heaven.”

“Yes, I have noticed that he, [Jefferson Davis] characterized me as a ‘political partisan.’ Well, if to preach the doctrine of temperance, and to preach against the open saloon as the source of most of our social, industrial, and moral evils, and therefore the greatest enemy of the Christian religion and the church of God, is to be a ‘political partisan,’ you may publish me as one, not only in your paper, but on the house tops; and by me stand over 3,000 Methodist preachers, not a dozen of whom would refuse to vote for a measure to prohibit the matchless evil of the age.”—Bishop

REMINDED.—That was a witty gentleman, says the Youth's Companion, who accounted for the difference between his gray hair and black whiskers by saying that the hair was “twenty years older.” There was both wit and good sense in the young wife who reminded her husband that she was not quite as old as his mother. The hint is a good one to young married people, who too often forget to excuse each other's imperfections.

“How do you like my cooking?” said a young wife to her husband. “Come, now, give me your honest opinion of it. How does it compare with your mother's?”

“If you want my honest opinion, I will say your cooking is very fair, but is not quite equal to mother's.”

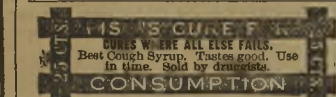

“I did not expect it would be equal to your mother's, but I wish you to remember that your mother had many years experience before you were capable of forming a judgment of her cooking.”

“I declare, you are right! I never would have thought of that. The point is a good one, and is entirely overlooked by young married men.”

And, unfortunately, it isn't thought of by young wives. The idea of any man saying to a young girl just a year or two out of school, “You can't cook as well as mother,” or, “You don't manage as mother,” and never taking into consideration that mother has had an experience of forty or fifty years! Suppose the young wife should turn round and retort, “You're not half as skillful a workman as my father.”—Boston Courier.

The Verdict Unanimous.

W. D. Sult, Druggist, Bippus, Ind., testifies: “I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism of 10 years' standing.” Abraham Hare, Druggist, Bellville, Ohio, affirms: “The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years' experience, is Electric Bitters.” Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood.
