There will be preaching at the West Market Street church to-night (Tuesday) at 7:45.

"Toot, toot," is the way the Twin-City Daily heads an article on the Roanoke & Southern road.

Justice.—The article of Justice is all right and proper, but we have so much original matter to day that we are not able to insert in this issue.

Mrs. Sallie Kivett, a venerable lady, supposed to be about 100 years old, the widow of Henry Kivett, living three miles from the town of Liberty, died yesterday at her home in Randolph county.

We hear that "Fred," son of Mr. W. A. Stowe, who lives a short distance out from town on the east side, was bitten this morning by a dog which was supposed to be mad.

A CRASH.—This is the head line which greeted the reader this morning, on the first page of the News-Observer of this date, while underneath, in bold type, the following appeared: "The State National Bank will not open to-day—Its President and Cashier said to have absconded with a large amount of its funds—all the other Banks as sound as a dollar."

And that is about all we know of the matter to-day. It is a sensation, truly. We cannot hear what has become of the President and Cashier. It we say, "gone where the woodbine

"twelfth," we are sure it is not Canada just yet, though the indications are that the two men are a long way from their "base" by this time—One of them having come up from Raleigh Saturday night. It is supposed that he went north on the first train, and if so, he could have reached Canada before the defalcation was known, which was yesterday at the hour for opening the bank. If we are not misinformed, the absconded President, O. E. Cross, was a son-in-law to the late distinguished banker, John G. Williams, and Sam'l. C. White, the Cashier, a brother to Mr. Williams' widow, who survives, and who was perhaps the largest stockholder in the bank.

The immediate effect will be—and unfortunate it is—to shake the faith of people in banking institutions; but while this is true, it should be remembered that such defalcations are rare in this section of the country, and that such occurrences are not often followed by others in the places where they occur. At this juncture no one seems to know where the downward tendency began, nor who is to be blamed for the first step in the misfortune. Facts will come in hereafter.

A New Suburban Town.

"A movement is on foot," says the Charlotte Chronicle, "to build a railroad depot at Newell's Turnout, a pretty little station on the Richmond & Danville railroad, six miles out of town from Charlotte." This indicates what seems to be a general tendency in the country, and which is supported by certain reasonable considerations. Considering the unwieldy size of the farms in the country generally, the sparseness of the population and the poor condition of the highways, life has so many inconveniences that there is no wonder if people seek various ways by which to effect a change. As things now are, the school, the church, the store, the shop, the doctor's office, are removed far from many of the people, who feel the inconveniences very sensibly and who will always embrace an opportunity to improve their surroundings. The remoteness of the institutions we have named from the people generally is felt all the more sensibly by the very terrible roads over which the people are forced to travel, and the difficulties encountered are still further intensified. Until the era of improved highways shall dawn upon the country, the condition of the people scattered here and yonder by the almost impassable roads, must be anything but pleasant. Think of a family who scarcely ever sees the town unless on some special occasion in the dry season of the year, and the transportation of those marketable products to the railroad town is worth about the price obtained for them. We have a new and altogether just designation for our roads leading into the country—"The Patent Horse Killer and Wagon Breaker and Device for Keeping the People Poor." We have heretofore shown that where
