The Home of the Great Auk.

That strange bird, the auk, who had an immense body with wings so puny they would not suffice to lift it from the ground, is not extinct, or rather, it is believed to be, and all that remains to remind us of its one-time existence are its bones, and some aged and ill looking stuffed specimens or reproductions in the various museums; the same being in no two cases alike, neither as to shape, arrangement of plumes, nor general expression; and so it is we get only a confused idea of how the bird really looked. Funk Island, an exposed rock, 32 miles northeast of Cape Freeds, Nova Scotia, was once famous as the resort of the great auk. Here these curious birds gathered in multitudes, and, in the breeding seasons, the weather being clear—a rare condition be it said—were often seen from the open sea, standing in serried ranks, like line after line of an army drawn up in battle array; tall, gaunt, silent.

Last summer, Frederick Lucas visited this island, a boat being sent with him and some companions from the Fish Commission's schooner Grampus; the weather being selected with care, and arrangements made to camp, for the island can only be approached or quitted under most favorable conditions, so exposed it is, with a heavy surf on its seaward face and threatening rocks and angry currents to leeward. The whole island was found to be strewn with the bones of these birds; they had been slaughtered by the hundreds, perhaps by thousands, for they could neither fly nor fight, but only waddle slowly along wheresoever they might be driven. An inclosure was found, built of stones—a sort of shambles into which they were evidently driven to be despoiled of their feathers, though it is certain they were sometimes driven aboard boats over planks laid from gunwale to shore. Over a hundred sets of bones were gathered, the crania of each specimen showing signs of fracture, as if they had been beaten about the head with clubs.—Scientific American.

Worth Knowing.

Mr. W. H. Morgan, merchant, Lake City, Fla., was taken with a severe cold attended with a distressing cough and running into consumption in its first stages. He tried many so called popular cough remedies and steadily grew worse. And he was reduced in flesh, had difficulty in breathing and was unable to sleep. Finally tried Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and found immediate relief, and after using about a half dozen bottles found himself well and has had no return of the disease. No other remedy can show so grand a record of cures as Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, which is guaranteed to do just what is claimed for it. Trial bottle free at C. E. Holton's Drug Store.

Egg Eating Hens.

As high authority as the American Poultry Journal says that there is no way of curing hens from eating eggs, but to prevent them by mechanical means is easy. A nest with a double bottom, the upper one inclined so as to allow the egg to roll to the lower one answers well, but the habit is one that is always acquired, and therefore a lasting one. Hens learn it by being in the presence of broken eggs, but they rarely break eggs themselves until so taught. If the nests are so arranged as to keep the eggs out of their reach they will forget the habit if fed liberally with meat for a while, but the safest plan is to out off the heads of such fowls before the habit becomes general.

Renews Her Youth.

Ms. Phoebe Cheney, Palsamon, Clay Co., Iowa, tells the following remarkable story, the truth of which is vouchered for by the residents of the town: "I am 73 years old and have been troubled with kidney complaint and lameness for many years, could not dress myself without help. Now I am free from pain and soreness, and am able to do all my own housework. I owe my thanks to Electric Bitters for having renewed my youth, and removed completely all diseases and pain." Some tools, such as circular cutters, files, etc., after they are forged into the shape required, must have teeth cut into them. Before this can be successfully accomplished a preliminary process is necessary. Hammering or forging the steel into the shape required will have hardened the steel to such an extent as to make the cutting of teeth into it impossible or difficult. It must, consequently, be annealed. This process is a double process. The steel must be reheated as carefully as before, and afterward cooled as slowly as possible. Many tools are only required to be hardened on a small part of their surface, and it is important that the unhardened parts should possess the maximum amount of toughness with the minimum amount of brittleness that can be attained. These tools can also be annealed after they are forged. The process of annealing, or slow cooling, leaves the steel cross-grained, gives it its maximum of ductility, and causes it, in fact, to approach the properties of lead.—The Ironmonger (London.)

Plant More Corn.

The following from the Little Rock, Ark, Enterprise, Farmer and Stockman, should commend itself to every sensible Southern farmer:

We of the South cannot perhaps raise corn or small grain so as to enable us to compete with the North and West, but can raise enough for home consumption and to spare. What we most need is to keep the corn crib and smoke-house at home and not be compelled to go to Kansas City, St. Louis, Chicago or Cincinnati for our oats, flour, pork and corn. This is the time, farmer friends, to remedy this evil. Plant more corn. This means more and better pork, at reasonable prices which will enable us to keep our cotton money at home instead of sending it elsewhere to purchase supplies and keep our country drained of its ready money.

Youth and Old Age.

A writer who is a good observer, and has had considerable experience, thus defines the difference between the old and young. There is, he says, a wide gulf between youth and ripe old age, hence the proverb "You can't put an old head on young shoulders." This proverb was written by an old man; youth had nothing to do with it. Youth don't believe the old man knows anything, and the old man expects continually the young man will be along saying, "I didn't know it was loaded." The wise young man will seek the counsel of those ripe in years and experience, and avoid the mistakes in life. But young America will continue to figure in the divorce courts, and compound his debts at ten cent on the dollar. He don't want to be told that it is loaded; he prefers to find out himself. He gets there and pays the piper generally.—Exchange
